Poisonings Laid to Balked Love

NIGHT WALL ST. CLOSING PRICES

Today

One Real Desperado.
In the Pig Business, Now.
There Was a Catch.
Never Too Much Wheat.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WHEN OKLAHOMA produces a desperado, it is a real one. Harvey Bailey, held in Texas for murder, kidnaping, etc., comes from Will Rogers' state and according to Mr. Keenan, United States assistant attorney general, should be kept in a portable iron cage, throughout his trial. Says he:

"That's my idea of how to keep that boy safe. If he wanted to take the stand I would move his cage to the witness platform."

THAT TAKES you to Italy, where they put as many as fifty prisoners in an iron cage in court. But that does not subdue them. In a recent Mussolini "clean-up" one of the caged criminals secretly took off his heavy, hob-nailed shoe, threw it through the bars and nearly killed one of the jury that had just convicted him.

However, Mussolini deals with that type of criminal, and the United States should do it, if it be necessary, hiring Oklahoma men to do the job.

IS GOVERNMENT in business? Yes, ma'am. To help the farmer, government will buy and slaughter 4,000,000 pigs weighing between 25 and 100 pounds and 1,000,000 fat sows weighing at least 275 pounds.

The government will pay a bonus of from $2 to $4 a head above market price. The carcasses will be given to those receiving public aid.

Hogs sell for $4.50 a hundred pounds. In 1929 the price was $11.31. Back in 1909 it was $7.24. Government says the hog-raisers are ruined if something isn't done, so the government will do something.

This first step will cost the public $55,000,000, but that isn't much in these days, especially if you print the money.

IT IS planned hereafter to have hogs marketed comparatively young and small, as that is the most profitable way.

The farmer says "fine." But what shall he do with sows too old for breeding? Unless fat, carrying much lard, they have no value. But then, if you get rid of 5,000,000 pigs suddenly, and cut all pigs off in their youth, before they have a chance to do much eating, how can they eat up the millions of bushels of corn that the farmers produce, and who will buy it?

NRA at first seemed "made to order" for union labor, indicating compulsory unionization of "open shops." But suddenly comes a shock. NRA will stipulate that in return for increased union wages and reduced union hours, union workmen shall produce a definite amount of actual work.

When the young man's father said to him, "My son, you can have everything, enjoy everything; it all depends on hard work," the son replied:

"I knew there was a catch somewhere."

Union labor knew that there was a catch somewhere.

THERE IS much wheat on hand in the world. The total stock August 1st was 960,000,000 bushels, the United States holding 345,000,000 bushels. The total on that date was 180,000,000 bushels more than in 1932. But it is not true that the world produces "too much wheat."

If all the hungry could have the bread they need, there would be a shortage. Ask the Chinese, or ask the small boy that fainted in New York's Fulton fish market waiting to get the daily gift of discarded fish on which he with a family of six were living.

The family had been living on second-grade fish only, day after day, sometimes varied by fish soup. Some wheat, made into bread, would have been welcome here.

PERHAPS OUR distillers will consider making whisky out of wheat. They make it now of corn and rye, and make beer of barley, with a certain amount of rice to clarify it.

Wheat ranks highest among grains and should produce better alcohol than rye or corn. Grapes produce the purest alcohol, requiring no rectifying as regards fusel oil, etc.

A LIVE MAHATMA is troublesome, but less dangerous than a dead martyr. So Gandhi, reduced in weight to about 90 pounds, extremely weak, is released from prison by the British, after a fast of eight days, following his three weeks' fast last May.

You can fight a man with gun, bomb or dagger, but it is hard to fight a man with an idea, when he is willing to die for it. The wise British say:

"Go and die somewhere else, not in our prison, and take with you the blessing of the king, parliament, lion and unicorn."

OUR QUEER dollar, cheap in foreign lands, hard to get and impossible to borrow in this fair country, continues to act up. Yesterday it went off violently, while the pound rose. The dollar in foreign countries was worth at 2 p. m. yesterday a fraction over 72 cents.

Not long ago, as regards its purchasing power, it was up to $2. Some that guess well predict that genuine inflation will appear at the end of the year, and we shall have a 60-cent dollar.

Who understands money? Nobody.

RADIO PRIEST ASSAILS MELLON

International News Service.

DETROIT, Aug. 24.—The Mellons and the Morgans were assailed today by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin as "Neronists—followers of the philosophy of Nero—to grind the common people."

The charge was hurled as the militant "radio priest" continued his second day of testimony before the one-man jury investigating the closing of two national banks here.

He opened his testimony with a broadside against holding companies as "fundamentally immoral." He referred to them as "hideout companies."

Then, swinging into a discussion of capitalism with Attorney General Patrick O'Brien, Father Coughlin declared Christianity and capitalism are not inconsistent.

ASSAILS MELLONS

He was asked:

"Don't you think so when 95 per cent of the people in this country own but 5 per cent of the wealth?"

The priest replied:

"Oh, you are speaking of another thing. I am speaking of the philosophic conception of capitalism, not capitalism as it operates in America. Here it has done more to create Communists and empty churches than all the teachings of Karl Marx.

"Men like the Morgans and Mellons call themselves capitalists. I would prefer to call them Neronists—they follow the philosophy of Nero, to grind the common people."

The pastor, whose radio talks on the bank situation to a national audience resulted in his appearance before Judge Harry B. Keidan's one-man jury, yesterday

Roosevelt Directing Coal Code

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Hugh S. Johnson told newspapermen today that the conference between coal operators and union leaders would be continued "by direction of the President under supervision of the National Recovery Administration, which will hand down the program of negotiations and act as mediator throughout."

Johnson said this was the first time in the history of the bituminous coal industry that leaders of the southern portion of the Appalachian group, which produces 70 per cent of the bituminous coal of the United States, "have of their own election sat down in a conference with the officers of the United Mine Workers in an earnest effort to agree on all the controverted matters which have bedeviled this vital industry for years."

Of almost equal significance, he said, was the fact that both Northern and Southern coal operators were conferring for the first time together.

MUCH WORK AHEAD

Informally, Johnson said considerable work remained to be done to reach a final agreement on the code, but he was highly optimistic that with the spirit shown at the conference at the outset it would conclude successfully.

He credited President Roosevelt with having made this meeting possible and said the program had the chief executive's "detailed approval."

The administrator urged that the public and interested persons suspend judgment on all controverted questions involved until the conferring groups have completed their tasks.

This development today closely followed Gen. Johnson's declaration banning anti-union qualifications in codes of competition.

3 POISONINGS LAID TO VAIN LOVE HOPES

By HERBERT S. REED
Staff Correspondent.

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Aug. 24.—A mild, little man with too much on his mind reached out—suddenly, insanely—for the delights of life, and swept the lives of three families into grief-wracked ruin—

That was the conclusion investigators arrived at today in the suicide of Druggist Edward V. W. Kerr, who took two women into oblivion with him Tuesday night.

John Bordanaro, Westmoreland County detective, said there was no longer a doubt that Kerr had poisoned himself. Nor did Bordanaro doubt that he had deliberately given the same poison to Mrs. Dorothy Yunker and Mrs. Della Gradler.

The detective could find no rational motive for Kerr's acts; he did not, he said, believe Kerr had been rational. Friends of Kerr also were inclined to question his rationality lately.

Kerr settled in New Kensington four years ago. Each summer since, Mrs. Kerr went elsewhere on vacation; and each summer, his friends said, Kerr stuck to business and behaved like an earnest, responsible man. Each summer, until now.

FRUSTRATED LOVE, GIN

He listed these:

Kerr had been drinking more gin than his weak, nervous system could withstand.

He had, Bordanaro said, been using narcotics.

His business was failing.

He was pressed for funds in his personal affairs.

He had been frustrated in love.

As Detective Bordanaro and Kerr's friends and relatives reconstructed the past and the personalities of Kerr and his two companions in death, a strange picture emerged:

A picture of Kerr living an outwardly quiet existence — a kind husband, a dutiful son, a pleasant neighbor; yet hugging to his heart

DAMAGE IN MILLIONS AS HURRICANE WHIPS ATLANTIC SEABOARD

By the Associated Press.

Death, terror and destruction rode today on the tail of the maddest storm to strike the Atlantic seaboard in many a year.

The death toll went well over a dozen with the derailment this morning of the crack Southern Railway train, Crescent Limited, as it hurtled a rain-soaked bridge spanning the Anacostia River just outside of Washington.

The engineer and fireman were killed and at least 13 persons injured.

Other deaths included two on the battered coastal liner Madison, eight in Virginia, the electrocution of a small girl at Sea Cliff, N. Y., and a motorist driving in a heavy rain at Coatesville, Pa.

Damage to property ran into millions.

Pennsylvania counted six dead as high winds and flooded streams tied up rail and highway traffic and caused many mills and factories to suspend.

Passengers Hurt in Wreck

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—The Crescent Limited, crack Southern Railway train en route from New York to New Orleans, carried two enginemen to instant death and sent 13 passengers and members of its crew to hospitals when it was derailed over a swollen stream near here at 4:45 a. m. (Pittsburgh time) today.

A weakened bridge over the eastern branch of the Anacostia River, just outside the capital, caused the disastrous, before-daylight wreck.

The engine left the rails, plunging into a mudbank with its operating cab submerged in the stream.

A. H. Bryde, of Washington, engineer, and J. H. Faye, fireman, of Perryville, Md., were killed.

A mail car and a coach were hurled ahead of the engine, diagonally across the tracks. A Pullman car was thrown into the stream and partially submerged. Several passengers were in it, but all managed to escape.

Four other cars hung precariously to the roadbed, saved from a worse crash only by their couplings. Two cars, off the track, swung directly over the stream, partially submerged, and only the pull of the cars in front

Gale Whips North to Maine

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Wreckage-strewn states of the Middle Atlantic seaboard breathed easier today as storm winds hurtled northward toward Maine, snapping at Northeastern Pennsylvania en route from the wind-lashed area between Cape Hatteras and Sandy Hook.

Southeast storm warnings from Portland to Eastport were ordered by the Weather Bureau. A switch of the storm winds to southwest was predicted for sunset as the tropic-born gale whipped into the North Atlantic.

Fair or cloudy weather, with dying winds were forecast for the central tier of states along the coast, hammered for two days by violent blows that played jackstraws with shipping, ruined resort areas and tore up communication systems.

WINDS CONTINUE

Over the area from North Carolina to New York, the Weather Bureau predicted "fresh to strong southwest" winds, shifting to west over the south portion, and "strong south, shifting to southwest" winds over the north por-

Gen. Vanderbilt Hurt In Storm at Camp

WRIGHTSTOWN, N. J., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Brig. Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt suffered a broken nose in the northeast storm which swept over Camp Dix, C. M. T. C. center, last night.

More than 350 tents occupied by reserveisit from New York, New Jersey and Delaware were destroyed and scores of windows in permanent buildings were smashed. Gen. Vanderbilt was struck by a door swung open by the wind.

HERRON NAMES MAGISTRATE

Mayor John S. Herron today announced the appointment of George C. Metzier, his leader in the Sixth Ward, as a police magistrate at Oakland, replacing William R. McNamara, son-in-law of former Congressman P. J. Sullivan.

McNamara is transferred to an accountant's position in the Mayor's office at the same salary, $3,000, which he received as magistrate.

He replaces W. W. McCracken, accountant, who is transferred to the City Department of Supplies.

The move is seen as another strengthening of the Mayor's political fences. It is the third change in magistrates since Herron took office in April.

Metzier, it is said, had been seeking the magistrate's job for some time.

Queen Mary's Eye Injured at Fete

LEEDS, England, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—A slight but painful mishap to Queen Mary today marred a visit of their majesties to Leeds Forsthe opening of the new civic hall here.

A piece of grit lodged in the Queen's eyes and caused her considerable pain until it was removed by Lord Moynihan of Leeds, president of the Royal College of Surgeons, an hour later.

Son of Woodin in Critical Condition

TUCSON, Ariz., Aug. 24.—(INS.)—William H. Woodin, Jr., son of the Secretary of the Treasury, was in critical condition today in the oxygen room of a Tucson sanatorium.

M'NAIR CHARGES UTILITY DODGE

Republican candidates for city office are soft-pedaling the utilities question, William N. McNair, Democratic candidate for mayor, charged in a speech last night at the Morse School, South Twenty-fifth and Sarah streets.

None, McNair said, dares tell the truth about millions of dollars annually wrung from the people of Pittsburgh by the gas, trolley, bus and telephone corporations.

The Duquesne Light Company annually earns $5,000,000 more than a "fair and reasonable rate" in Pittsburgh, he said. He called the consumer rate reduction obtained last fall by Council "only a postponement of the day of reckoning."

McNair questioned:

Movie Strike Ends At Major Studios

More than 3,000 men were expected to report for work, the International Alliance of Theater Stage Employes having taken cognizance of the National Labor Board decree dissolving the walkout which began July 8.

Squirrel Hill Maids Want NRA Code

Housemaids of the Squirrel Hill district have decided that with all other occupations going under the NRA banner, they should also be included in the code. Shorter hours, higher wages, and more freedom are their aim.

For the past few days two of the maids, whom the girls in the district insist they do not know, have been going to various homes in order to enlist all the maids in their cause.

Miss Barbara Pavlisak, employed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Smit, 5628 Hobart street, said when asked what she knew about the situation:

"Two girls knocked at the door. One was tall and thin; the other short and chubby. The taller one told me they were going to organize a strike. They wanted more pay. Other people were getting $15 a week under the code and they thought they should get a raise as their pay was $3 a week."

Miss Mary Hollick, 20, said:

"I told the other girls I was going to write to President Roosevelt about it. I get $3 a week and I do all the work. I try to save some money, but I can't. My family, in Morgantown, W. Va., want me to help them. I don't even go to see them any more because I haven't any money to give them."

MACHADO FOES FLY TO KILL

NASSAU, N. P., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Reports that an airplane carrying men determined to assassinate Gerardo Machado, deposed and exiled president of Cuba, had left Cuba for this city, today caused placing of guards armed with rifles about the hotel where Machado is living.

Bahamian police generally do not carry firearms and the issue of rifles indicated the gravity with which government officials regarded the airplane report.

Several members of the A. B. C. secret society have arrived here by steamer and have been engaged in the spread af anti-Machado propaganda. Their presence caused the former chief executive to remain close to his hotel.

Last night it was reported that when Machado leaves Nassau he will go first to Canada. Efforts are being made in Havana to institute extradition proceedings against the former president.

Carnera on Air With Globe Trotter

Primo Carnera, the heavyweight champion of the world, will be on the air with Louis L. Kaufman, the Globe Trotter, from the editorial room of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, over stations WCAE and WJAS at 6:30 o'clock this evening.

Carnera, here for an exhibition bout which has been postponed from tonight until tomorrow night, will speak in both English and Italian.

Arkansas Legalizes Beer, Wine Sales

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Beer became legal in Arkansas today when Gov. J. M. Futrell signed the beer bill passed by the Legislature, making the sale and manufacture of 3.2 beer and light wines legal immediately.

STORM DELAYS TRAINS HERE

Trains arriving in Pittsburgh from the Washington district are reported late today as the result of heavy rains there.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's Liberty Limited, due here last midnight, is expected to arrive at 5 p. m., being marooned by high water near York, Pa.

The main line of the P. R. R. was reported little affected.

On the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad westbound trains were running slightly behind time, and reports were lacking on the eastbound schedules beyond Washington.

Storm Darken's Liberty's Torch

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(INS.)—The torch on the Statue of Liberty was extinguished last night for the first time since the statue was erected in 1886.

'Baby Skipper' Wins Heroic Battle With Storm in Graveyard of Ships

International News Service.

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 24.—Out of the graveyard of ships off the Virginia Capes just before dawn today limped a battered, reeling liner, with two of her officers missing and two of her crew badly hurt, but victorious in a 36-hour battle with the raging Atlantic.

She was the S. S. Madison, and for 12 hours yesterday she lay in the trough of a hurricane-whipped sea, piercing the ether with radio calls for help. But she came proudly into port under her own power.

About 7 o'clock Wednesday morning a tremendous wave—the largest ever seen by veteran mariners aboard—swept over the bow and carried away an entire section of the forward cabin.

Quartermaster Edward Corbett fought his way along the deck to inspect the damage and was making his way back to the bridge when a second gigantic wave swept over the vessel and carried him overboard. He was not seen again.

Capt. William (Billy) Heath, "baby skipper" of the Eastern Seaboard Lines, sounded the order to heave to and Second Mate Lycargles Lawrence went forward to secure lifeboats loosened by the wave which claimed Corbett.

While he was at his task, another wave broke over the bow and swept him overboard to his death.

His wife was waiting for him when the liner docked this morning.

By this time the vessel was rapidly listing and filling with water. In the hold 699 barrels of beer had broken loose and were rolling about like ten-pins. At 7 a. m., Capt. Heath ordered Chief Radio Operator Benjamin Beckerman, of Brooklyn, N. Y., to broadcast an SOS.

A fleet of Navy and Coast Guard vessels rushed to her aid. Shortly after 7 o'clock last night the Coast Guard cutter Carrabassett appeared on the horizon. But so violent was the sea and the wind she could not approach the Madison. A sheet of oil was cast over the raging waters and Capt. Heath decided to come to port under his own power with the cutter and the destroyer Upsher leading the way.

Finally, listing heavily to starboard, the ship nosed into her dock. The 37 passengers, the majority of them women, set up a loud cheer.

Capt. Heath, hatless, wearing a gray overcoat and a blue shirt open at the collar, plainly showed the strain he had been under, but he still wore a smile. He patted each passenger on the back and said:

"Be good children.

tion, but not of the gale force of yesterday.

Washington, storm-beaten yesterday, set about counting its losses, with no official estimates of damage available, but unofficial guesses running into thousands of dollars from uprooted trees, torn-up power lines and damage to buildings.

Derailment on the edge of the capital of the crack Crescent Limited of the Southern Railway System killed two, injured at least 13 and tied up north-south railway traffic as one direct result of the gale.

Capital residents in low-lying areas kept a wary eye on the rain-gorged Potomac, which was rising swiftly from outpouring tributaries in Virginia and Maryland.

HIGH TIDE FEARED

Experts doubted that the river would flood any of the city unless tide waters from Chesapeake Bay were driven upstream by wind.

The Navy went to work early to dry out the Naval Air Station at Anacostia, under six feet of water all night, which lapped at the motors of 30 planes.

The Coast Guard, busy beneath a deluge of calls for aid at sea and from relatives of persons at seaside resorts, was informed that Cape May, N. J., was damaged badly and that Coast Guardsmen, Marines and naval reserves were policing the city.

The cutter Travis informed headquarters here it had found and taken into Lewes, Del., the tug Baldrock, with three women passengers aboard. It left New York Sunday for Norfolk and had been unreported since its departure.

Coast Guard vessels were seeking the tanker Veedol, of the Tidewater Oil Company, unheard from for three days while bound from Dallas to New York with seven aboard.

Chesapeake Bay Steamer Overdue, Virginia Resorts Clear Wreckage

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Uneasiness as to the fate of the Chesapeake Line steamer City of Norfolk, unheard from since she left Baltimore Tuesday night mounted today as Tidewater Virginia sought to clear away the wreckage of the worst storm in the history of this section.

Check of the toll of the raging northeaster that raked this section of the coast with an 80-mile blast, leaving eight dead and $2,000,000 property damage in its wake, revealed Willoughby laid waste. Ocean View Park in ruins, Virginia Beach already laying plans for rebuilding its damaged water front and Cape Henry still practically cut off from all communication with the rest of the area.

An unconfirmed report early today said the steamer City of Norfolg was sighted riding at anchor in one of the sheltered inlets along the bay early yesterday afternoon, but officials of the company early today stated they had received on word from the vessel.

At her dock lies the battered steamer Madison of the Old Dominion Line, that came in under her own power at 2 o'clock this morning under the escort of the Coast Guard destroyer Upshur to report two members of the crew lost in the storm.

Willoughby Spit, covered with water yesterday, was buried in sand today. Marines and police sentries were on guard to prevent looting to the end of the spit. The resort section presents a scene of desolation and waste.

Jersey's 'Summer Playground' Battered by Wind and Wave

International News Service.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 24.—Southern New Jersey was taking toll of the damage done by the most devastating summer storm in 25 years.

A northeast wind of hurricane force, roaring seas and torrential rains battered the Jersey coast yesterday, smashing resorts from Cape May to Sandy Hook.

In the midst of the hurricane, a freak twister desended on the boardwalk at Wildwood and in 10 minutes had ripped its way through the resort, leaving thousands of dollars damage.

Loss to orchardists and tomato growers in the southern part of the state was estimated at more than $1,000,000. Tremendous damage was done peach and apple crops. Growers estimated the loss at $500,000.

Scores of pleasure craft were sunk at their moorings or set adrift by the gale. Many highways were flooded, stopping all traffic.

The storm's violence lashed Vineland for twelve hours. The borough owned electric plant was down for seven hours. Factories closed and the two afternoon newspapers were unable to appear.

Similar conditions obtained at Millvale, Salem, Bridgeboro and other towns in the southern part of the state.

The 300-foot municipal pier at Cape May went out under the battering of high tides and the hurricane sent a 90-foot coast guard mast crashing to the beach.

Train service between Ocean City and Philadelphia was suspended as the tides rose over the tracks.

The inlet section of Atlantic City suffered badly, sections of boardwalk decking and railing were broken and swept away. First floors of apartments and many hotels on the beach front were flooded.

At Margate the huge waves rushed back half a block from the beach, many persons there moved out of shore hotels, men carrying women and children to safety.

High winds damaged the municipal convention hall, Wildwood, one section being torn from the building. Several hundred Philadelphia members of the Roxborough Business Men's Association, who had made their headquarters in the hall, were compelled to vacate.

Maryland's Toll of Death In Storm Reaches Seven

BALTIMORE, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Maryland counted at least seven dead today as the state pulled itself out from the wreckage of yesterday's hurricane and struggled to establish communication with fronts still isolated.

Two soldiers, Sergts. Downing and Bailey, of the 66th Infantry, Fort George G. Meade, and an unidentified truck driver were swept from the BaBltimore-Washington boulevard bridge over the Patasco River and were drowned.

Walter Parrish, of Oakland Mills, was carried away and drowned in a swollen creek in Carroll County.

An unidentified woman was caught up by the rushing stream around her home on Miller's Island, near Baltimore, and was drowned.

Reports began to trickle in from Maryland's Eastern Shore, which apparently was badly damaged, and there were unverified reports that eight houses were swept into the sea when the waves cut a channel across the sandspit to Sinepuxent Bay.

Communication still was not established with the Eastern Shore or with Southern Maryland to the south of Washingtn. Annapolis, the state capital, 28 miles southeast of Baltimore, was marooned and no news ad been received from it since late yesterday.

Railroad service over the entire state was crippled. Even in the mountainous section around Cascade, trains were halted by floods and weakened bridges. The main line of the Baltimore and Ohio between Washington and Baltimore was under water and traffic was being diverted over Pennsylvania tracks.

FLOOD MAROONS 2 GIRLS, MEN

TOWANDA, Pa., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Marooned for several hours on top of a cabin caught in flood waters of Towanda Creek, two girls and a man were rescued early today by lines thrown to them from a truck.

After repeated rescue efforts with boats had failed, Edward Berry detoured with a heavy vehicle and approached within 50 feet. Men threw ropes to the exhausted trio and one by one they were hauled to safety.

The girls are Stella Bennett and Mary Johnson, of Lopez, Pa. The man, from Hillsgrove Civilian Conservation Corps camp, was not identified.

A fourth man, also a C. C. C. worker, stripped off his clothing and after a desperate struggle in the swift current reached higher ground, summoning rescuers.

Water covered highways to a depth of five feet in some sections, showing no signs of abating early today. A bridge was washed out on the Roosevelt highway.

The only road to the C. C. C. camp at Laquin was under deep water and authorities said the workers might have to miss several meals.

Lester Getty, of Towanda, was rescued from his marooned car near Towanda, after he had taken off most of his clothing in preparation for swimming to safety.

Four inches of rain in about 24 hours had raised the Susquehanna River this morning to about eight feet, five feet above yesterday's level, and the stream is continuing to rise.

Village Periled by Flooded Dam, Priest Dies in Rescue Attempt

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—The big eastern storm moved into New York state today, with a deluge of rain that marooned three women and two children on a perilous island in Esopus creek, endangered Catskill mountain villages and sent many creeks over their banks.

A 50-mile gale and rain drove all shipping on Lake Ontario to shelter, and hid the fate of the 45-foot yawl Ontario, only craft to leave Rochester since the storm set in. She was unreported.

Father James Healey, of New York City, a Catholic priest, was believed to have been drowned today while trying to rescue three women tourists and two children marooned in the rising flood war of Esopus creek, at Mt Tremper.

When a breeches buoy failed to reach the women, Father Healey and another man jumped in a boat, it overturned and the priest disappeared. The other man was saved.

The five drenched figures, pitifully watching attempts to rescue them, had stood since early morning on a narrow strip of land, the water only a few feet away.

Twenty miles away, on the west slope of the mountains, the half-flooded villiage of Fleishmann turned anxious eyes toward the dam which holds back Switzerland Lake. When men arose in a heavy storm at 2 a. m. to open the emergency flood gates, they found water already rushing three feet deep over the machinery. It was not certain whether the gates were opened or closed. Lake Switzerland, nearly a mile wide, lies above the business section of the village of 800 population.

New York City, with a three-day rainfall that exceeded the normal fall for the whole of August, faced serious traffic jams because of flooded highways and railroad tracks. Fallen trees strewed streets. Nearly every community in Nassau County, Long Island, was plunged into darkness last night as power lines fell.

Windows all over New York City were shattered as the wind as measured at the top of the Empire State Building, reached a velocity of 90 miles an hour last night.

MANY INJURED IN WRECK

Washington police at first reported that two other men had been killed in addition to the fireman and engineer, but later said they had been mistaken.

Ben Johnson, railroad employe, who had been riding in the engine cab, was pulled out of the sunken compartment. Those at the wreck said he probably had been fatally injured, but at the hospital doctors said none of their wreck patients was in any immediate danger.

There were conflicting reports as to the speed of the train. Officials of the road said it had been proceeding under reduced speed orders.

Several of those on board the train said it was their impression that it had been moving at a high rate of speed in order to make up part of the hour it was behind schedule.

All of the cars were badly smashed, showing that they had hit with considerable force.

The terrific rains that had kept rescue workers throughout all of nearby Prince Georges County, Md., working through the night to get people out of their homes in the low places, had swelled the waters of the eastern branch until they were virtually level with the railroad tracks. The branch had blocked highways into the capital.

EYEWITNESS TELLS GALE RUIN

DOVER, Del., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—A graphic description of the storm at Ocean City, Md., was given here today by C. P. Hench, of Harrisburg, Pa., a refugee from the battered resort town.

Arriving here by automobile after a battle through water-covered highways, he said the damage had been tremendous.

He knew of no loss of life.

He was in the Atlantic Hotel yesterday, and the waves that swept from the Atlantic Ocean across to the Sinepuxent Bay in the rear of the narrow strip of land shook the hotel noticeably.

Water stood in the lower floor of the hotel.

The people became panic-stricken yesterday afternoon, he said, as the gale continued and the thought of high tide in the early morning gripped them.

Both ends of the boardwalk were walshed away, and the breakwaters were badly damaged, Hench said.

6 DIE AS GALE RAGES OVER STATE

Traffic Blocked, Mills Closed by High Water; Scores Homeless

Associated Press.

Beaten by a raging northeaster that spread a wide path of death and destruction in sweeping over about half the state, Pennsylvania today surveyed a loss of at least six lives and millions of dollars of property damage.

While the intensity of the storm lessened smewhat during the forenoon rivers continued to rise, still blocking railroads, rendering scores of families homeless, and doing irreparable damage to crops.

Fifteen-year-old George Lemar Shenberger, drowned when the porch of his parents' home at Yoe, near York, was swept away. A second drowning occurred near Gettysburg, Mrs. Benjamin Arendt, of Altoona, falling from her son-in-law's arms into a swollen creek.

KILLED BY AUTO

Walking in a driving rain near Coatesville, Hayes Morris, of Wyebrook, was killed by a motorist, who did not stop. David Glover, 51, of Mifflinburg, was fatally hurt in an accident near Sunbury.

Wind, reported at times as high as 60 miles an hour, battered down trees, tore up telephone and telegraph poles, and caused highway blockades at innumerable points in the eastern part of the state.

PLANTS SUSPEND

York estimated damage as high as $3,000,000; several hundred steel mill workers were thrown out of work when flood waters caused closing of shops in Coatesville; two score plants had to be closed in Reading.

The Delaware spread its waters two feet deep over water front streets in Philadelphia, and the Schuylkill covered the Baltimore and Ohio tracks. In Reading, the Schuylkill broke a previous high mark by going up to the 20-foot point.

The same stream flooded several streets in Pottstown, 35 families leaving their homes early today.

Trains on the Reading Railroad between Philadelphia and Reading were tied up.

Pittsburghers On 3 Steamers Riding Out Gale

All steamers of the Merchants and Miners Transportation Company have been reached by wireless and are riding out the storm with no injuries to passengers, according to L. O. Miller, commercial agent for the line in Pittsburgh.

Alex Wiley and daughter, Elizabeth Ann, and Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Hunter, of Washington, Pa.

Residents of Pittsburgh and vicinity who have been traveling on the Cunard Line coastwise steamers are reported safe. There are 19 on the Mauretania, now off Leeward Islands, and 12 on the Franconia, now at Bermuda. The Transalvania is now at Quebec, with 15 passengers from this section.

HONEYMOONERS ON MISSING SHIP

The hurrican which was whipping the Atlantic to fury today obscured the fate of two Pittsburghers who sailed for a honeymoon abroad on the City of Norfolk.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sweet were married here Monday night. The bride was Dorothy Myers, of 3561 Shadeland avenue.

Bound for La Havre, they were aboard the City of Norfolk when she put out from Baltimore last night into a gathering tempest.

At a late hour today the vessel, of the Baltimore Mail Line, was still unreported. She had failed to put in at Norfolk, Va., where she was due this morning. The line's offices reported they had been unable to get through to her.

Pittsburghers Held In Storm District

Members of the families of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Miller, of Inverness street, and Dr. E. S. Walls, of the King Edward apartments, were in the storm-swept zone. Dr. Walls said he supposed they were undisturbed by the storm, as he had not heard from them. Mrs. Miller, attempting to reach her children by phone, was unable to get a connection, the lines being reported down.

STATE PRESSES ACTION AGAINST POLO STAR

Prosecutor Refuses To Drop Nurses's Assault Charge

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—Cecil Smith, San Antinio, Tex., cowpuncher and second ranking polo player of America, may yet have to stand trial on a charge of attacking Eugenia Rose, pretty Evanston nurse.

State's Attorney Eugene Wachowski announced today that the state still has an interest in the case despite Miss Rose's unwillingness to prosecute the poloist.

Smith's $5,000 bond has not been vacated and, contrary to an earlier report, the Texan is not en route to join his polo team in the East.

Declaring the state's attorney's office is not to be trifled with, Attorney Wachowski said:

"The state has an interest in this case that is paramount to either the interest of Miss Rose or Smith. Either he is guiltless and deserves exoneration or pressure has been brought to get Miss Rose to drop the case. I intend to find out which.

"Miss Rose still has until 1 p. m. tomorrow to appear in Judge Brightmire's court. If she does not appear, we will start proceedings to learn whether perjury or defamation of character has been committed."

Magistrate Willis R. Brightmire, of Evanston, said that if the state sees fit to prosecute the case, Miss Rose will be subpoenaed to testify against the poloist.

Declaring in a note handed by her father, Dr. I. W. Rose, aged dentist of Cooperstown, N. D., to Magistrate Brightmire, that she "expected to be married and didn't want any more publicity," the pretty nurse asked that the charges be dropped, stating that she would not appear to prosecute her charge.

Smith reiterated his statement that the charge was "preposterous," and said:

"I am ready to meet it in court at any time."

Miss Rose secured a warrant for Smith's arrest on the attack charge last Saturday, charging that he offered to drive her to her home in Evanston from the hospital where she was attending "Rube" Williams, star polo player who had suffered a broken leg in the East-West matches.

Smith stopped and forced her from his car, she said, and she struggled with him for two hours.

ident, were first to arrive and sat for more than an hour in an ante-room until operators were heard from.

LEADERS PLEASED

Johnson, informed that both labor and industriai leaders were pleased with the interpretation he issued last night, which stated explicitly that although no open shop clause could be written into any code the NRA had no ban on the company union as such, intended to press for agreement on the remaining points at issue.

The first was wages, the union demanding a basic $5 a day rate, the non-union operators, $3.84. There were signs, however, that a compromise on this point was not distant.

Prospects were described as improved for presentation of an agreement to President Roosevelt for signature by the end of the week.

Besides adjustment of wage terms in the coal code, which is to be drafted virtually anew by Johnson because of the inability of groups within the industry to compose differences on their own, outstanding issues were the union demand for incorporation of provision for the "check-off" system—by which union dues are deducted from pay envelopes at the paymaster's window—and compromise of differences on hours.

Woman Slayer Cheats Death Chair by Fast

Dies in Texas Jail After Refusing to Eat Since May

LAGRANGE, Tex., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—By starving herself to death, Mrs. Maria Dach, 36-year-old farm woman, has cheated the electric chair of the penalty imposed for the murder of Henry Stoever, her 58-year-old helper.

Convicted for the slaying in May, Mrs. Dach began refusing food almost at once. Her weight dropped steadily from 200 pounds until she weighed only 100 pounds when she died last night in her jail cell.

She had eaten only three meals in 37 days and then only nibbled at the food brought to her.

She was awaiting the result of an appeal from the death sentence when she died. Her case was the second in which a woman had been given the death penalty in Texas.

Stoever's burned body was found buried in a pit in Mrs. Dach's back yard on April 16.

At first she declared Stoever killed himself and that she burned and buried the body.

Later she said she shot Stoever as he slept because he had attacked her last December.

The husband, according to police, was shot at the breakfast table "because he had been running around with other women."

SAY SHOOTING ARREST NEAR

The mystery surrounding the fatal shooting of Edward A. Sabel, 47-year-old carpenter, in the yard back of his home, 938 West North avenue, last July 31, will be cleared up today with the arrest of the trigger-man, according to Lieut. Frank Ferris and Sergt. Samuel Wheeler, of the homicide squad.

An eye-witness said the shooting was accidental and has described the scene and the assailant to them, the detectives said.

On the night of July 31, the witness heard Sabel and the other man arguing in the yard about a real estate deal in which they were involved, according to Sergt. Wheeler. At the climax of their argument, according to the witness's story as related by the police, the other man warned Sabel:

"I should shoot your head off. I'm going to give you until tomorrow to straighten this thing out."

With this remark he attempted to put away the automatic gun he was pointing at Sabel, when it accidentally discharged, the witness said.

2 REARRESTED IN BOND 'DEAL'

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Ronald Finney, central figure in the Kansas million dollar bogus bond scandal, and Leland Caldwell, his employe, were rearrested early today on charges of forging and uttering $30,000 of city of Hutchinson Park improvement bonds.

Both pleaded not guilty. Bond was fixed at $50,000 each, which they were unable to furnish immediately. Preliminary hearing was set for September 5.

Finney, bond broker and market speculator, and Caldwell were arrested two weeks ago on charges of uttering forged bonds and released under bail of $25,000 and $15,000 respectively. The charges against Finney involved $10,000 in bonds, while the counts against Caldwell involved $3,000.

'Tub Death' Prosecutors At Odds Over Trial

Star Witness Sees Little Hope for Conviction

By RALPH B. JORDAN
International News Service.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Aug. 24.—A break in the ranks of the prosecution appeared today in the Lamson murder trial.

While attorneys for the state and the defense concentrated on obtaining a jury—a goal which seemed likely to be reached before nightfall—the state's star witness, Dr. Frederick Proescher, stepped out of the solid prosecution phalanx.

He admitted that his private opinion is that David A. Lamson, handsome Stanford University press executive, charged with the "bathtub murder" of his pretty young wife, Allene, will go free.

EXPECTS ACQUITTAL

The noted German pathologist, chemist and psychiatrist, sadly commented that, though he is firmly convinced of Lamson's guilt, he fears the jury will vote acquittal because the state's theory of motive will not be understood.

But in that opinion he stood alone on the prosecution side, Deputy District Attorney A. P. Lindsay and his two assistants insisting that they are confident the jurors will heed their plea to send the 31-year-old University Press executive to the gallows.

The state's theory is based upon sex and cruelty impulses—a Freudian theory that a man may kill that which he loves best.

LOVE NOT DOUBTED

Prosecher declared today:

"Strangely, I do not doubt Lamson when he says he actually worshipped his lovely young wife. But I believe he killed her just the same.

"In Europe, where my theory of motive is much better understood, this case would have been concluded long ago in a conviction. But I'm doubtful here.

"The records of the police in London and Paris are full of such cases—full of convictions on just such evidence as we have to present."

Three former maids are now prospective witnesses, one for and two against Lamson, but for the moment only Dolores Roberts holds the spotlight of interest.

First Dolores startles the world that is following the Lamson murder trial by admitting that she expects to become a mother next November. Then on Monday night she "elopes" with 21-year-old "Red" Sorenson.

Evicted Woman Freed For Invading Home

Miss Ada E. Cross, 60, formerly of 4248 Stanley street, today pleaded guilty to forcible entry into her own home and Judge Elder W. Marshall suspended sentence and placed the costs on the county.

Miss Cross had spent two weeks in jail until about a week ago when she was released on her own recognizance and sent to the New Future Home.

Attorney Lois D. McBride, appearing for Miss Cross, explained that she had been evicted from the home where she had lived for 33 years by a building and loan association which held a mortgage of $1,000 on the property, and were owed an additional $1,000 in taxes and interest.

For several nights after the eviction she slept in the front yard and then neighbors broke into the home and put her back in the house, Mrs. McBride stated.

Miss Cross will go to live with a sister in Neff's Mills, Huntingdon County, Mrs. McBride stated. The building and loan association recently sold the Stanley street property for $3,500, according to Mrs. McBride.

Baby Held as 'Hostage' For Hospital Bill Free

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Judge Joseph David criticized severely yesterday a hospital charged with holding an infant "hostage" for seven months to insure payment of a bill.

He issued a writ of habeas corpus calling upon the Evangelical Hospital to release the child to her father, Stanley Shopkus.

Lawyers recited to the judge that Shopkus' wife, Bessie, died in the hospital last December 15, the day following the child's birth. Shopkus said he had paid $111 for his wife's care, but had been unable to pay for the child's board. The judge declared:

"Human beings are not chattle. They cannot be held as collateral for bills. This practice must stop."

Judge David told Shopkus:

"You are foolish if you pay one dime of the $260 bill for your daughter's care."

RADIO PRIEST ASSAILS MELLONS, MORGANS

Sees Merging of Groups Under Roosevelt

declared a faulty philosophy was the root of the nation's financial troubles—the philosophy that "investors are lambs to be shorn."

Today he proceeded to develop this theme:

"I agree with Carter Glass that holding companies are fundamentally immoral and not conducive to good living nor the standard of rectitude."

LAUDS ROOSEVELT

Asked by Attorney General O'Brien whether he was a Democrat or a Republican, Father Coughlin replied he was primarily interested not in the principles of the parties but in the kind of men they proposed for office. He said:

"Mr. Roosevelt is above the Democratic party and the Republican party. He has amalgamated the best in each.

"We have adopted an immoral principle in our politics, the principle that to the victor belong the spoils."

The "radio priest" lost no time in returning to the savage attack he started yesterday on the banking group which included the First National Bank and was headed by the Detroit Bankers' Company as holding concern.

The First National group and the Detroit Union Guardian group—whose main unit was the huge Guardian National Bank—were shattered by the crash which developed into a national bank crisis last February.

CONSERVATORS NAMED

The two federal super-banks are now in the hands of conservators and have released only 40 per cent of deposits, Father Coughlin said:

"Yesterday I charged that the 1930 financial statement sent to the public by the Detroit Bankers' Company was not identical with the sworn statement deposited with the secretary of state. Today I shall prove that the 1931 statement was also false and designed to mislead stockholders."

Swinging back to his charges of falsified holding company statements, Father Coughlin declared:

"The reason for this falsification was because they did not dare to show the huge indebtedness of the parent company and the subsidiaries."

The priest repeatedly referred to holding companies as "hide-out companies."

At one time, he said, the Detroit Bankers Company and its subsidiaries had on hand only $1,814,909 to meet debts of $14,630,716. He accused the bankers of including the First National building, one of the largest in Detroit, among the assets, whereas the building is owned, he claimed, by the Northwestern Life Insurance Company. He said:

"The Detroit Bankers Company was paying dividends all the time it was looting its biggest unit, the First National Bank . . . and all its subsidiaries . . . through its nefarious system of interlocking directorates, which enabled Peter to rob Paul and Paul to write off his debts on Peter's books."

SUGGEST MOTTO

He suggested that the Detroit bankers company adopt the motto: "heads we win; tails you lose."

He declared that before any move can be made to release more money to depositors, the stockholders of the closed banks must be made to pay their double liability assessments. He said:

"I grant that it would be tragic to take a man's home away to satisfy a stock assessment. But the bankers didn't hesitate to take away the homes of the poor on mortgage foreclosures."

Interlocking directorates enabled the units of the group controlled by the Detroit Bankers Company to borrow from one another without proper security, Father Coughlin charged.

He produced evidence which he said showed that a $1,379,000 loan from the First National to the Assets Realization Company (another subsidiary of the group) was almost entirely written off the First National's books as "lost, doubtful or slow."

Much of Father Coughlin's testimony yesterday was a reiteration of the charges and theories included in his public utterances during the Michigan banking holiday last February. He sketched economic history and theory since the opening of the twentieth century and said that the debt burden of the World War was a partial cause for the depression.

Father Coughlin yesterday assured Circuit Judge Keidan that he had phototastic copies "to back up everything I say about the Detroit banks." He then charged Wilson W. Mills, former chairman of the board of the First National, with having given false testimony before the jury when he stated that the bank was 25 per cent liquid.

ACCUSES BANKER

Father Coughlin said the bank was but 14 per cent liquid, and that Mills had the true statement of the bank's condition "but he kept it in his pocket."

It was expected that Father Coughlin would complete his testimony today.

United States Senator Arthur H. Vanderberg (Rep.), Michigan, is expected to testify Friday with testimony from Gov. William A. Comstock, Edsel Ford and other prominent witnesses scheduled for next week. Mills also is expected to be recalled to the stand for re-examination in the light of testimony given earlier this week by

Hoover Gives Lift, $100 Loan to Hitch-Hiker

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Hitch-hiking isn't so bad if a former president gives "a lift" and then a $100 loan, John Wade Gordon, Memphis (Tenn.) youth declared.

Gordon said he was hiking along a Northern California highway Monday when a big car stopped in response to his signal. The youth immediately recognized Herbert Hoover, who was in the back seat.

Gordon said he rode with Mr. Hoover to San Francisco and the former President gave him a $100 bill to "help me along until I get a job."

United States Senator James Couzens (Rep.), Michigan.

REPLIES TO PRIEST

NORTHPORT POINT, Mich., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Wilson W. Mills, former chairman of the board of the First National Bank-Detroit, denied today the statement of the Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin before the Detroit bank investigating jury that published figures as to the banks' condition when it closed were false.

Here on a fishing trip, Mills said he could understand Father Coughlin's testimony only on the premise that he "does not understand standard banking bookkeeping practices universally used."

Father Coughlin testified yesterday that Mills on the stand had asserted that when the bank closed its "cash on hand and government bonds" item was $108,585,075; that it was 24 per cent liquid and that it had, in round figures, $60,000,000 with which to meet general deposit.

Father Coughlin said this was not true; that actually the bank had as "cash on hand and government bonds only $99,302,808; that it was only 14 per cent liquid and that it had but $49,000,000 with which to meet general deposit withdrawals.

Mills said he obtained the figures he quoted from the officers of the bank having charge of the bank's accounts and that he had "the fullest faith they were right and exact in every way and showed the actual condition of the bank in as much detail as is shown generally in banking practice."

He added he would be glad to take the stand "in defense of the figures given by me."

WOODIN TO SEE ROOSEVELT

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Refreshed by a holiday of his own, President Roosevelt today turned to affairs of state and eagerly awaited a visit from Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin and word of progress on the code for the bituminous coal industry.

After his 220-mile motor trip through the rain over the Catskill Mountains yesterday the President retired early last night and shut off the telephone.

The President spoke his own confidence, for the first time, yesterday in a united American front for the New Deal. Far away in the woods of Southern New York he told the Boy Scouts encamped on the Ten-Mile River headquarters that the 130,000,000 people were or would be enrolled in the national campaign for better days.

PUBLIC WORKS JOBS REQUIRED

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes today demanded that public works projects be the kind that put men to work.

The public works program, he said emphatically, is a back-log for employment, not a financial reservoir for tapping by communities which plan construction at some later date.

Bank in Scottdale Soon to Be Reopened

GREENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 24.—Sale of 12,000 shares of common stock of the First National Bank of Scottdale for $360,000 will result shortly in the reopening of the bank.

The plan was approved two months ago by the Comptroller of the Currency and committee of depositors undertook the sale of the stock, which is non-assessable.

Ford to Back NRA, Detroit Rally Told

DETROIT, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—William Mills, chairman of the publicity committee for the NRA campaign in Dearborn, a suburb, told a rally there last night that officials of the Ford Motor Company had given their assurance that they will co-operate with the NRA movement as soon as the details of the automobile code have been satisfactorily completed.

RETAILERS ASK NRA TO BAN PRICE WARS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—A demand that retail stores be protected from unfair competition to compensate for their enlistment under the Blue Eagle banner was put before the recovery administration today in renewed hearings on the retail code.

Benjamin A. Namm, of Brooklyn, said selling establishments must be given a chance to make a fair profit and assured of protection from price cutting and misleading advertising if they were to join. He spoke for 14 big New York department stores.

Namm joined several other witnesses in urging approval of a competitive section of the retail code forbidding such practices.

Namm said the stores he represented welcomed higher wages and shorter hours for their employes, but that steps must be taken to curb price cutting and advertising claims of underselling competitors.

BAN UNDERSELLING

Namm advocated adoption of the fair practices section and spoke particularly for two sections, one which would prohibit sales at less than net invoice cost, plus 10 per cent, and the other which would outlaw general underselling claims or misleading advertising.

Namm said that without the Recovery Administration's approval of the fair practice section of the code, "we cannot continue in business under the increased labor costs made necessary by the New Deal."

ATTACKS PROPOSAL

Percy S. Straus, president of R. H. Macy & Co., assailed the proposal to write into the code a provision to regulate prices.

Straus said that "if retail trade groups can fix prices at net invoice cost plus 10 per cent then they may logically raise the margin to 15 per cent, 25 per cent, or even higher percentages." He added:

"The adoption of such a principle will not increase consumption nor build purchasing power; it will choke the free flow of commerce and shrink volume."

William H. Hager, of Lancaster, Pa., president of the Pennsylvania Retailers Association, attacked "predatory price cutting practices," and urged adoption of the code's fair practices section.

F. G. Houlihan, a Cambridge (Mass.) furniture dealer, had testified earlier that furniture merchants would "gladly accept" the shorter hours and higher wages imposed under the code if definite means were found to eliminate unfair competition trade practices.

He urged approval of the trade practice section of the code which, among other things, specifically forbids misleading advertising. He said:

"From New York to Main Street the question of false advertising is of vital concern to all merchants and consumers."

Claims of any advertiser that he constantly undersells a competitor also were assailed by Harry W. Reihl, general manager of the St. Louis Better Business Bureau. He said no other part of the retailers' code was so important to consumers who had been "victimized in almost every part of the country."

Kaufmann's Code Stand Lauded by Merchants

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—As the retail code hearings proceeded today at the Auditorium of the United States Chamber of Commerce there were still heard echoes of the brilliant address made on Tuesday by Edgar J. Kaufmann, of Pittsburgh. It was asserted that the suggestions made by Mr. Kaufmann are certain to be adopted in the set-up for the entire mercantile industry.

The practicability of the Kaufmann suggestions was upheld by all the merchants present. His plans were considered as keeping "in the middle of the road," adaptable alike to employer and employe.

It was pointed out today by a New York merchant that Mr. Kaufmann advocated fair merchandising, honest advertising and practical community building.

Mr. Kaufmann advocated a square deal for the 1,000,000 small retailers of the country. He said:

"These are the merchants whom we must protect. The Retail Merchants' Association of Pittsburgh is not asking equality of hours with competitors in other classifications, such as drug stores, neighborhood stores in outlying districts, chain, variety, or five-and-ten-cent stores. We ask for equality in wage rates between competitive stores in a defined trading area, and equality in absorption of the unemployed.

"The formula by which the retailer under the code can be protected is approximately this:

"(1) That the minimum per hour (of wages) should be identical in all competitive stores in a defined trading area and

"(2) That the ratio between operating hours and employment hours be the same."

'Army' to Swing Employers Here Into NRA Ranks

Responsibility for bringing approximately 12,000 employers here within the restrictions set up by the NRA will rest with a "sales army" of 500 to 600 volunteers in the general recovery campaign committee's announced co-operation drive.

"YOU have to run just as fast as you can to stay where you are." Ordinarily we don't mention this breathless attitude in buying. We don't buy our goods that way. But situations do alter cases. In a broad sense our goods bought at the old lows are not running out nor will they run out for some time. But buying has been on such a scale that we cannot make long-range promises on specific items. HENRY SCORED AS REPUBLICAN PAYROLLER

Pleading for united support of the Democratic slate headed by William N. McNair for mayor, John L. Gadd, retired candidate for Council, today attacked the Democratic mayoralty candidacy of John Henry.

Gadd, a contractor, accused Henry of having had his "head and shoulders in the Republican pork barrel," and of not having "been able to wash them clean enough to run for a Democratic nomination."

Urging all his friends to swing their support to the McNair camp, Gadd called Henry "nothing but a Republican payroller putting up a big show for personal glory."

Gadd's statement explained his withdrawal last Tuesday, as having been in the interests of the Democratic party.

Three Democratic meetings are scheduled for 8 o'clock tonight. John M. Huston, for council; John J. Kennedy, and Andrew G. Smith for Common Pleas Court, and Austin L. Staley, for County Court, will speak at the Rochelle School, Knox avenue and Rochelle street, Thirtieth Ward. Charles Ward will preside.

Kennedy, Smith, and Staley will speak at Carrick High School, Carrick. John J. McCarthy will preside.

Representative John J. Kane, for council; A. Marshall Thompson, for Common Pleas Court, and James L. O'Toole, Jr., for County Court, will speak at the Morrow School, Davis and Massachusetts avenues, North Side. Peter J. Demuth will preside.

in this municipal department or in that bureau—when right here in our midst some of the greatest financial pirates in America are allowed to operate uncontrolled.

"The Republican candidates glibly discuss budgets, a reduction in the millage, even garbage; some can juggle tax figures so cleverly that tax-payers think Pittsburgh is a taxless city—but none of them dares juggle with the utilities.

"Why? Because these candidates already have the promise of support from New York and Chicago-controlled utilities, or because they desire and expect it, or because they are afraid of antagonizing these rich and powerful forces that dominate the Republican party in Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania."

McNair arraigned Council for not going to the defense of the business man compelled to pay to the light and power monopoly a so-called "ready-to-serve" tax.

He said:

"Thousands of Pittsburgh industries, closed, not using a single watt of Duquesne Light power, had to pay monthly tribute to the power trust amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars each year of the depression.

"And in the same manner, every user of power, from lights to sewing machines, is compelled to pay to the Republican-protected light trust the rates fixed by that light trust, which, even according to a Pennsylvania Senate committee, are just double what they should be."

McNair will speak tonight at 8 o'clock in the Bellefield School, Fourth Ward. Representative John J. Kane, Democratic candidate for Council, and James L. O'Toole and Austin L. Staley, Democratic candidates for County Court, also will address the meeting.

JUVENILE COURT SCOPE TOLD

The new Juvenile Court will play an important role in the welfare work of the future, Attorney W. G. Negley, candidate for the court, told a meeting of welfare workers at 16 East Park way, North Side, last night.

Negley discussed the work of the court in correcting childish waywardness, as an important factor in reducing the number of future delinquents.

He will address the Colored Voters' League in the Afro-American Church, Buena Vista street, tonight.

Jury Commission Aspirant to Talk

Louis Alpern, candidate for Republican nomination for Jury Commissioner, will address a meeting at the Chalfant Borough hall, Chalfant, and a meeting of the Independent Citizens League at Tarentum, tonight. He promised to warn voters of what he said was an attempt by Senator James J. Coyne to control the jury commission.

Farnsworth Meetings Scheduled Tomorrow

Henry J. Farnsworth, Democratic candidate for mayor, will speak at the following mass meetings, sponsored by the United American Veterans' Association, tomorrow evening at 8:00: Perry, Allegheny, and Latimer High schools, and Conroy and Columbus schools.

The Pittsburgh Central Labor Union, representing more than 100 organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, has indorsed the candidacy of Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay for Judge of Common Pleas Court, P. J. McGrath announced today.

FIREMEN BACK MUSMANNO

Naming Judge M. A. Musmanno "a real American," the Heidelberg Fire Department has indorsed his candidacy for Common Pleas Court. The resolution promised him "as many votes as we can get" and "one hundred per cent" support.

Judge Musmanno will speak tonight at Conroy School, Twenty-first Ward; Allegheny High School, Twenty-second Ward; Troy Hill School, Twenty-fourth Ward; Hamilton School, McKees Rocks, and the Antioch Church, Sewickley.

ROWAND LAUDS LENCHER

Election of Judge Benjamin Lencher, candidate for County Court, will still leave him in a position to aid in the work of the Juvenile Court, according to Judge Harry H. Rowand, of Common Pleas Court.

Reorganization of the Juvenile Court, started by Judge Lencher four months ago, is as great a thing as has been accomplished in the county's history, Judge Rowand said in a speech last night.

He pointed out that the establishment of Juvenile Court as a separate branch of the county judiciary would not divorce Judge Lencher from this work, "for the act which creates the new Juve- Court states that it may at any time call upon the County Court for assistance."

Judge Lencher will speak tonight at eight North Side meetings of ex-service men. They will be held at Latimer Junior High School, Tripoli street; Conroy School, Page and Fulton streets; Allegheny High School, Sherman avenue; Troy Hill School, Claim and Hatteras streets; Columbus School, Irwin avenue; Perry High, Perrysville avenue, and Horace Mann School, Shadeland and Dickson avenues. He will also appear at St. Coleman's Church, Turtle Creek.

Charitable Body Gets Antiques As Donations

The Goodwill Industries, Liberty avenue and Twenty-eighth street, which collects unwanted household goods, often gets some peculiar gifts.

Among them are a British-Indian bronze bottle about 150 years old, a large Staffordshire serving platter about 90 years old and a glass pinch bottle about 90 years old.

An appeal for wearing apparel has been made by the organization in preparation for the winter requirements of the afflicted.

MACKRELL WINS HERRON BACKER

Heretofore billed as a member of John S. Herron's campaign committee, Chevalier Salvatore Sunseri, influential Italo-American, today announced his support of Joseph N. Mackrell for the Republican nomination for mayor.

His decision that Senator James J. Coyne was not in sympathy with the desires of the majority of Italian-Americans, who want a clean city, lower taxes, and adequate provision for the working classes, led to his change, Sunseri asserted.

Harris Opens Drive For Bench Tonight

Burtt Harris, candidate for Judge of Juvenile Court, will open his speaking campaign tonight by addressing meetings at Allegheny High, Latimer and Perry Junior High Schools, Conroy, Troy Hill, Columbus and Horace Mann Schools.

LAWYER BOLTS INDEPENDENTS

Swinging his support to William N. McNair, Democratic candidate for mayor, J. I. Simon, attorney, resigned today from the General Committee of the Citizens' League of Allegheny County.

Simon blamed the placing of personal political ambitions above the public good, asserting in a letter to the league:

"It is clear that the machine will benefit by this break in the ranks of the independents, and will win the primaries.

"The only hope for the independents lies in the general election in November.

"The Democratic organization has a candidate, William N. McNair, whose ability, integrity and championship of the peoples' interests have never been questioned even by his most powerful opponent. In my opinion, it has the only opportunity of winning the peoples' fight.

Another effort to harmonize the independent forces for the coming campaign had apparently broken down today.

Until late Tuesday, according to E. J. Wuerthele, Council candidate, efforts were made to get a new conference to discuss whether Joseph N. Mackrell or P. J. McArdle might withdraw as candidates for Mayor. It is known that William P. Witherow, one of the McArdle backers, discussed the matter over the telephone with Mackrell, but the effort failed.

Veterans to Push Their Candidacies

Candidates for office who are ex-service men will speak at public meetings arranged by the United American Veterans' Association tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. in these school buildings:

Sixteenth Ward, Norse School, South Twenty-fifth and Sarah streets; Seventeenth Ward, South High School, South Tenth and Carson streets; Twenty-ninth Ward, Carrick High School, 125 Parkfield street; Thirtieth Ward, Rochelle School, Rochelle street and Knox avenue, and Thirty-second Ward, Overbrook Junior High School, Library road.

PHANTOM LISTS BRING THREAT

Assessors in the First, Ward, McKees Rocks, were warned today they would be haled to court if they did not clear their assessment books of aliens and other illegal voters.

Leo A. Riordan, chief county assessment investigator, said investigators who went to the ward yesterday had been followed by loungers.

Riordan said 157 phantom voters had been found on assessment books yesterday, and had been stricken off. There were, he said, 49 in the Third, 39 in the Twelfth and 69 phantoms in the Twenty-first Ward.

Nixon Addresses Miners Tonight

Attorney Clarence B. Nixon, candidate for judge of County Court, will address a meeting of Mollenauer Local No. 3, United Mine Workers, in Polish Falcons Hall, Mollenauer, tonight.

ENGLISH SEES CITY AS TAX CUT 'BEACON'

Declaring general conditions in the country would be greatly improved if every tax-levying body had reduced taxes as did Pittsburgh's Council, Councilman W. Y. English urged the election of Mayor John S. Herron in a radio address over WCAE last night. He said:

"With the whole world in distress, with most large cities in this country in financial trouble, many with their credit exhausted, Pittsburgh stands out like a beacon light."

Citing the high premium of Pittsburgh bonds, Councilman English paid tribute to a policy of care and caution over a period of years for the city's credit standing.

Praising the Mayor, he declared:

"His great ability and tact have enabled him to retain the respect and friendship of workmen and win new friendships among employers of all kinds of labor.

"In critical times ahead with the untried National Recovery Act, the city needs an executive who understands both sides of the labor question."

DEMOCRAT RIFT ENLIVENS MEET

Democrats gave further evidence last night of the fighting spirit which animates their party, and, if necessary finds outlet in battling within the ranks. A meeting of city committe members and registrars was held at Peabody High School through a call from City Chairman John Murray.

The followers of John M. Henry, mayoralty candidate, accused Murray and his friends of trying to run the affair in the interest of William N. McNair, the organization mayoralty candidate. Some "regulars" tried to have the Henry people ejected.

There was considerable debate and a fine flurry of accusation back and forth before the meeting finally adjourned with no one ejected and no peace in sight.

THWARTED LOVE, GIN BLAMED IN POISON DEATH TRIANGLE

DRUGGIST WAS AMBITIOUS TO BE 'LADIES' MAN,' POLICE TOLD

She came, Sprowll said, three or four times a week. Sometimes she asked for medicine, which had to be prepared by Kerr, who was the only pharmacist in the place. With young Sprowll she would not discuss medicinal needs.

More often, she came only for a sundae, and then Kerr would sit in the lunch booth with her and chat. The clerk said:

"I went out, but you could hear him kidding her. He always kidded women a lot. But I don't think she liked him much."

For months the acquaintance went on like that, and if it ripened into deeper feelings, no evidence of them remains.

a hope and belief in his capacity to be a man with many women to his credit.

He had been married seven years. But his clerks say they felt obliged to slip out of the store when an attractive woman entered, and to let Kerr wait upon her. Clerk Fred Sprowll said that Kerr never had told him to do so. Fred said:

"I just felt that was the way he wanted it."

And Fred recalled:

"She was always very nice. She always called him 'honey' and 'dearest' and names like that. I guess she tried pretty hard to please him."

Among the women who came to the store was Mrs. Dorothy Yunker, who lived at 1220 Taylor way, a few doors more than just across the street. She was 25, and had three children: Patricia,

Develops Friendship With Blonde At Family Parties and Dances

Meanwhile Kerr's acquaintance with Joseph Gradler was developing into a two-family friendship. The Gradlers lived at 526 Ridge avenue, two blocks from Kerr's drugstore at 1201 Taylor avenue and a block from his home at 500 Locust street.

The Kerrs and the Gradlers visited, played bridge, dined, on rare occasions danced together. Kerr's roving eye roved often in the direction of Mrs. Gradler, his clerk said. He went one night to a bridge party at the Gradlers' home. The next day the clerk asked him if he had won and quoted Kerr as saying:

"Oh, the others played bridge. I danced all evening in the living room with Mrs. Gradler."

But the blonde, vivacious Mrs. Gradler never let Kerr upset her interest in her husband and her two daughters, Almerda, 6, and Lois, 3. Her husband had no reason to suspect her loyalty, nor Kerr's friendship, he himself says, adding:

"We have been married seven years and we have been very happy. She had never gone out with anyone but me since we were married, until Tuesday night."

Then the memory of that night shook him and he sobbed out:

"She went out with my friend and he murdered her."

When the will to murder—if it did—bobbed up in Kerr's consciousness can only be guessed. It may have been there last Saturday.

On that day Mrs. Elva Coudreit came to Kerr's store. She is Mrs. Yunker's sister. Kerr talked to her about her sister, Mrs. Coudreit said, and asked her to advance his suit. She quoted him as saying:

"Fix it up for me."

She reminded him, she related, that Mrs. Yunker was a married woman. There might be trouble.

Kerr replied, according to Mrs. Coudreit:

"Never mind. I'll give Dot and me both something so that nobody'll ever be the wiser."

Did he mean poison?

Ill Woman Goes to Store And Gets Her Fatal 'Remedy'

Mrs. Yunker went to the drug store to get something to relieve insomnia and headaches, from which she had been suffering, according to her husband and her sister.

She entered the store, Fred Sprowll said, between 3 and 3:30 o'clock. Kerr told her that he would "make something up for you and you come and get it about 10 o'clock," according to his clerk.

She left, and Kerr went to the prescription room, to emerge shortly with a bottle filled with capsules of some white stuff. He set it aside, then went about his business.

Trade was slow. Kerr sat and worked a cross-word puzzle in the Sun-Telegraph, discussed baseball with young fellows lounging in front of his store, finally went to dinner.

He returned dressed like a bridegroom—new shoes, new hat, new suit, colorful necktie—and announced:

"Won the prize in the suit club this week."

The loungers commented:

"Sure hot!"

Kerr, pleased, laughed and went into the prescription room.

There he set bottles in order, wiped off scales and work table, swept the floor, dusted shelves.

Fred Sprowll thought he had never seen the room so tidy.

"Everything was just where it ought to be."

Kerr passed the time until 10 o'clock at small chores, waited on a few customers, went out and swept the sidewalk as usual.

Mrs. Yunker came for her medicine, took it from Kerr, who laughed and kidded her, and went home. At 10:30 Kerr closed up shop and went home, too, 45 minutes earlier than usual, his clerk said. His grandmother, Mrs. Ella Weidel, of Johnstown, vertified that.

Mrs. Weidel, keeping house for her grandson while his wife was in Syracuse on a summer vacation, saw nothing unusual in his demeanor.

She said:

"He was as happy and bright as could be. You wouldn't have thought he had a care in the world."

Neighbors said that he had told Mrs. Weidel he was "going out with the boys." They said she repeated that today. Mrs. Weidel, 82, but calm, bridled when she heard of it. She insisted:

"He did not. He said he was going to a party in Wilkinsburg."

Had he named the street, the address?

Mrs. Weidel said "no:"

"He d'Jn't know himself."

Kerr, who studied pharmacy at the University of Pittsburgh, was acquainted with people in Wilkinsburg and knew the streets well, according to young Sprowll, who visited the borough with Kerr.

'Borrows' Young Wife of His Friend, Saying, 'I'll Take Good Care of Her'

Kerr gave his grandmother his keys and money, and left her alone in the house; both unusual actions. Then he turned up at the Gradlers' home.

He asked:

"Joe, let Della go to a party down in Wilkinsburg with me. We're one short. You know me, I'll take good care of her."

Gradler asked his wife if she cared to go. To his surprise, she answered yes. Gradler was reluctant. Where was the party?

Kerr replied lightheartedly:

"Oh, back of the Columbia Hospital. I've forgotten the street. You trust me, don't you, Joe!"

Gradler, caught between suspicion of Kerr and the need to show his faith in his wife, he said, consented. But he had done so with misgivings. He said:

"However, my wife said she felt quite safe with him, and he has been my friend for years. I had heard that he had been drinking a lot lately, and I was a little afraid."

So Kerr and Mrs. Gradler drove off in the new car which Kerr had bought a few days before. He had told Mrs. Weidel that he was going to drive the car to Syracuse to bring his wife home from her vacation Sunday.

Meanwhile, at the Yunker home, Mrs. Yunker had prepared for bed. At 11 o'clock she took two of the capsules Kerr had given her. Mrs. Coudreit, mounting the stairs, heard a scream, hurried to her sister's aid.

Mrs. Yunker was standing with arms upraised, body taut. Her lips were a livid purple. Suddenly she fell onto the bed, as though a bullet had drilled her. Mrs. Coudreit rushed to her, turned her face up and saw that she was dead.

Dr. H. C. Elliot was called. He leaned over Mrs. Yunker, caught the odor of bitter almonds, and announced:

"Poison."

The two capsules she had swallowed amounted, Dr. Elliot estimated, to 10 grains of the deadly stuff. Enough, he said, to kill two

Two Found Dead in Automobile As Husband Waits at Home

Meanwhile Gradler was passing anxious moments waiting up for his wife.

The direct route from New Kensington to Wilkinsburg is by the Logans Ferry road, but Gradler recollects that Kerr told him he was going to take a new route and mentioned Oakmont, Verona and the Frankstown road.

There are indications that he did follow that route, as he is reported to have stopped for something to eat at a barbecue near Verona.

About midway between Verona and Wilkinsburg, the road dips sharply into the Sandy Creek hollow, and at the foot of the hill the Sandy Creek road, narrow and winding, turns north toward the Allegheny River.

About one-half mile out the Sandy Creek road is a lonely spot. There the auto with the bodies of Kerr and Mrs. Gradler, was found. On the right side of the road is a tall hedge close to the highway and on the left fallow fields.

At 2 a. m. yesterday, Herman Cohen, of Sandy Creek, passed a blue coupe parked on the wrong side of the road, at the edge of the field, according to his report to detectives.

Cohen's suspicions were not aroused and he did not stop. Several other cars passed on the same road, according to residents of the district.

At 9:30 a. m., W. H. Johnson, of Allegheny River boulevard, noticed the couple sitting upright in the car and the parking lights still burning. He stopped, and, failing to arouse them, notified Constable Sam Bickerstaff, of Penn Township, who called county detectives.

The automobile was headed away from the Verona road. Detectives found Kerr sitting upright with both hands on the steering wheel, his head thrown back and his mouth open.

Mrs. Gradler, they said, was leaning slightly toward Kerr. Her dress was neat, not disarranged. She was wearing a little black hat. At first glance, the couple appeared to be sleeping. According to County Detective Peter Conners, they had been dead for about eight hours.

On the floor of the car was found a capsule, a duplicate of those at the Yunker home.

The capsule held traces of a white powder and, according to Detective Whisner, had been moistened. Its contents will be analyzed, he said. At the feet of Mrs. Gradler was a thermos bottle partly full of a clear liquid believed to be water. The cap of the bottle lay on the seat between the two.

The ignition of the car had been shut off and the gasoline tank was about one-half full, disposing of any carbon monoxide poisoning theory.

Police Believe Victim Tricked Into Swallowing Poison Dose

Detectives said they do not believe Mrs. Gradler took the poison knowing what it was, or that it had been forced on her. Such action as the former would hardly be taken, they point out after she left home light-heartedly for a party, and if force had been used there would have been some sign of a struggle.

Detective Whisner said of Mrs. Gradler:

"I believe she took the poison believing it was something else."

Kerr's wife was expected to arrive home today. Notified by wire of his death yesterday, she set out at once in an automobile with her father, Frank Jewell, of Syracuse.

Mrs. E. J. Bennett, mother of Kerr, arrived at his home last night from her home in Johnstown. She refused to credit the accusations against him. She said:

"I can't understand it. If we could only find the address of that party in Wilkinsburg. I'll bet that would clear everything up."

Kerr's mother revealed that he had written a letter to his wife on Tuesday. It was found on the counter of his store shortly after his body was discovered. Mrs. Bennett saw in it proof that he had not intended to poison himself, but had brought about the three deaths by mistake.

The letter follows:

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa.,
Aug. 22, 1933.

Dear Margaret:

I received three cards today, telling me of your fine trip. I am so glad that you had another fine, enjoyable trip. The druggist from the hospital is going to work next Sunday, so we will see you with bells on in Buffalo at Ford Hotel at 12:30 daylight time.

Bill and I are looking forward to the trip. Grandma is feeling fine, and I am tiptop again. I went to bed early last night and had a good rest. I am going to a party tonight, Saturday night I will get to bed early so we can leave bright and early Sunday morning.

Bill was up and played chess last night, and he will be up tonight. I will write you Thursday, so you can receive it Saturday.

I will close with this short note for this time.

Grandma and I send love to all, and bushels for your own dear self.

Lovingly,
EDWARD.

Poison Deaths Reveal Mystery Surrounding Life of Druggist

None Able to Point Motive for Taking Of Three Lives

When Edward V. W. Kerr, New Kensington druggist, poisoned himself and two women, he left mystification among families of the three victims. How little they knew of his life is illustrated by their statements to the Coroner and to newspapermen.

For instance:

Joseph L. Gradler, of 526 Ridge avenue, New Kensington, identified the body of his wife, Della E. Gradler, and said:

"On Wednesday, August 23, 1933, about 11:45 a. m., I was notified that my wife had been found dead in a coupe automobile belonging to E. V. W. Kerr, a druggist, of 1201 Taylor avenue, New Kensington, Pa., whose dead body was also found in the same automobile as it was parked on a road leading from Sandy Creek to the Allegheny River boulevard, Penn Township, about 10:30 a. m. the same day. I have no idea what caused the death of my wife."

This was sworn statement to Deputy Coroner F. X. Spitzer.

To newspapermen, Gradler gave this statement:

"Kerr told me that he was invited to a party in Wilkinsburg. I don't know the address, and that the party was one couple shy. Since his wife was out of town he wanted to take my wife. I thought it was queer and I had heard that he had been drinking a lot lately and was a little afraid.

"However, my wife said she felt quite safe with him, and, after all, he has been my friend for years. She said that if there was going to be any drinking at the party she would leave. I finally consented. He called for her in his car after he had closed the store and told her to take a coat as it was a little chilly.

"When she did not come home all night, I notified police. We have been married seven years and have two children—Almerda, 6, and Lois, 3. We have been very happy. She had never gone out with anyone but me since we have been married until last night. My wife carried life insurance, which, I believe, pays double in the event of accidental death."

'On His Way to Party Last I Saw of Him'

Kerr's grandmother, Mrs. Ella Weidel, of 818 Lumes street, Johnstown, identified the body of the man as her grandson, Edward Vernon Kerr, 30, and a pharmacist, and said that he lived at 500 Locust street, New Kensington. She said:

"I have been keeping house for my grandson since June 28, 1933, when his wife went on her vacation to New York state. My grandson, Edward V. Kerr, left his place of residence Tuesday, August 22, at about 11:30 p. m. and that time he said he was going to a party in Wilkinsburg, but did not state who was going with him. That was the last I heard of him until I was notified of his death."

Mrs. Weidel told reporters:

"I don't know any reason why he should have done this. It is a complete surprise and shock to me. His wife, Margaret, is on a vacation. They have no children. I don't know who the woman was that was with him." (This was before she was told that it was Mrs. Gradler).

Dr. H. C. Elliot, of New Kensington, who was called to attend Mrs. Yunker, said that she was dead when he arrived. He said that he had been the family's physician for many years and that he had known Mrs. Yunker since her girlhood. He had a very high opinion of her. He said her husband had been ill six months ago, and had been in a weakened condition since. The poison which the girl took was in powder form, contained in capsules, said Dr. Elliot. There were six capsules, of which the woman had taken two he said. She died at 11 p. m., three minutes after she had swallowed the poison, he reported.

Hints 'Mistake' and 'Easiest Way Out'

Statement by Charles A. Yunker, 1220 Taylor avenue:

"Dorothy, my wife, although not in ill health, has been troubled with nervous spells. She has been well and happy lately, but yesterday went to Kerr's store to get something to "settle her nerves" so she could sleep. Apparently she died a very few minutes after taking the medicine about 11 o'clock. The bottle which was found near her I gave to the officers who were here this morning. I was too upset to notice either the label or the contents of the bottle. We have three children —Patricia, 7; James, 4; Richard, 2. We were not intimate with either the Kerr or the Gradler family and did not know any of their habits. I guess Kerr found out he had made a mistake in the medicine and took the easiest way out, although I have nothing to base this statement on."

Child Gleefully Boasts 'Mother's Poisoned'

Tears and laughter mingled in the lives of the Joseph Gradler family yesterday.

While their father answered questioners at the morgue where his wife's body lay, Almerda, 6, and Lois, 3, played gleefully outside their home at 526 Ridge avenue, New Kensington.

To Lois and Almerda death was only a strange word. Of newspapermen, Almerda demanded:

"Have you heard about all the trouble? Mamma got poison. Betcha don't know, either."

Grim-faced friends of the family whisked Almerda and Lois indoors, and locked the doors.

Lois emerged when her father returned, massaged a newsman's head with a cosmetic compact, bet that she could "give you lickin'."

"She went out with my friend and he murdered her."

'Kiss of Death' Girl Still Jinx To Sweetheart

Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—Mary Margaret Collins, the "kiss of death" girl, whose last seven sweethearts have met death, continued to be a jinx today to her latest sweetheart, Sol Feldman.

A year ago, when Feldman was shot and critically wounded, the superstitious said he was sure to die. But Feldman recovered and laughed at the "jinx."

Now he and the "blonde jinx" have been arrested for a traffic violation, while in Miss Collins' car. At the show up, Feldman was identified in the robbery of a dress shop.

Eyestrain Dangerous Symptom to Neglect

It is common to hear people complain of their eyes and say, "Oh, my eyes pain me so. They burn and ache. I must stop reading or get new glasses."

Dr. Copeland

In most instances painful and aching eyes can be traced to muscular weakness. These symptoms are due to the excessive use of the muscles of the eyes. Like other muscles of the body, excessive strain leads to fatigue and pain.

Do you know that the eye moves to the right or left, up or down, in or out, by the action of certain small muscles? If one group of muscles is weak, or if a single muscle is defective, more work is placed on other muscles. This causes them to tire quickly, causing pain and burning discomfort. The pain may become severe and of such a nature as to cause great anxiety and worry.

Eyestrain is especially common in persons whose occupations demand frequent and excessive use of the eyes. For example, it is a common complaint among stenographers, typists, librarians, proof readers and followers of other similar professions. At times it becomes necessary for the victim to change his occupation and engage in work that does not require excessive use of the eyes.

But not by any means is change in occupation always necessary. The strain and weakness may be of a temporary nature and may be corrected by eye exercises and the wearing of proper glasses.

A method of treatment sometimes is as follows: The patient is instructed to use the eyes in the opposite direction than that to which he has been accustomed. For example, if he has been reading with the light from the left side, he is instructed to adjust his chair so that it falls from the right side. This causes new muscles to do the work.

Often eyestrain and eye pain can be traced to excessive reading or reading in a glaring light. If your eyes tire easily do not read too much, and above all, use a reading lamp with a soft subdued light. The light should illuminate the reading page but never produce a glare.

Eyestrain may lead to chronic complaints, such as headache, nausea, indigestion, lack of appetite and other disturbances.

I would advise all sufferers from eyestrain to get expert advice. If necessary glasses should be worn. It is foolish to let pride interfere.

Bear in mind that the longer you neglect any ailment of the eye, the longer it will take to cure it. The eyes are precious organs that can never be replaced. Take care of them and protect them from injury.

Should a Man Accept Wife's Money to Get Education?

Is it okay for a wife to buy the groceries, so the big boy can knock off work and get himself an education?

And what will happen if she does?

Will it help him . . . or make a bum of him?

Lotta wants to do it. She has the money. Bill has the ambition. But every time she suggests the combination might get him ahead in the world, he blows up.

"Let my wife support me?" he says. "Never! I wouldn't think of such a thing."

And so——

Dear Miss Robinson:

There is a deadlock in my family, and I'm appealing to you to help break it.

Maybe I'm all wrong. If I am, tell me, and I will stop what I am trying to do. But oh, I do so want to do it!

I am married. My husband is very ambitious, but he has never had a chance to do the studying he wants to do—and which is necessary for the work he would like to go into. He has always worked hard to support us, and now I want him to let me carry us, while he goes to school, so that he can realize his ambitions.

You see, not long ago an aunt of mine died, and left me quite a sum of money. He wants to be a doctor. He has always wanted to be one. But his folks were poor, and he had to stop college in his second year, and go to work in an office. He is not happy there, and will probably never get very far ahead at it, because all his thoughts are on what he would like to be. And he really isn't fitted for business.

REJECTS CHANCE

When this money came to me, I immediately told him that there was his chance . . . that we could do as we pleased now, and that way of spending it would make me happy.

But he says that his pride would never allow him to take support from his wife. He insists that when he married me, he expected to support me, and not to have me shelling out for him, so long at least, as he is healthy.

This makes me so unhappy. I know that he isn't happy where he is. I know how he hungers to be a doctor, and I know he has real talent for that work. Do you think he should let his pride stand in the way like that? Especially when I would be so happy, seeing him getting into the work he loves?

My mother is against me, too. She is afraid that if he does do as I want him to, he'll gradually get so he will expect me to carry us. She says men just naturally are like that, and I will be making a bum of him. But I don't believe that. I want him to have his chance. Shouldn't he take it?

WANTS OPINIONS

I wonder what other husbands and wives think of this. I know that there are cases like ours—where the wife has helped her husband like that. I would like to hear from some of those people. Please help us, won't you? I know he thinks he is being chivalrous, but that kind of chivalry sometimes seems to be like just plain stubbornness.

LOTTA.

All right, folks! Come on!

What's your slant on Lotta's Man?

Should he give up the job he hates, and let her pay for his cakes while he works to bring his big dream to life? Or is it beneath a real man's dignity to let his wife help him realize that dream?

And if he does let her, is Mamma right? Will it make a tramp of him?

Have you lived a story like that? If so, tell us about it. How did it work out?

Impostors Work Hardship on the Aged Poor, Says Fay King

I BET DAT OLD GUY'S GOT A LOTTA DOUGH HID AROUND HIS SHACK
I'M THANKFUL I CAN MANAGE SO WELL ON MY SMALL SAVINGS SINCE YOUTH!
POOR OLD SOUL - I'LL GO WITHOUT LUNCH AND GIVE HER THE MONEY!
POSED AS BEGGAR HAS FORTUNE IN BANKS
FAY KING

By FAY KING

Arrest, accident or death sometimes brings to light the fact that one who was supposed to be a beggar, adrift and dependent upon the kindness of strangers, in reality had plenty of money. More money than many who deprived themselves to give.

Such fraud not only disgusts the public, but endangers countless of worthy aged.

The deserving are ignored because of these impostors. And many old persons who, through rigid economy from earliest youth, have managed to save enough to care for themselves in old age, are suspected of having much more than the little which is ample for their simple needs.

Young thugs begin to think that any old person is an eccentric, a miser and rich, all because of the fraud these few have practiced.

Given in Marriage

A Sequel to Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary Agrees to an Early Wedding

It was only for an instant that Mary's answer to Noel's question and to Lillian's hung in the balance; and I knew that if Noel had not spoken first, declaring that their marriage could not be too soon for him, Mary's reply to the curious, hesitant query that followed that declaration would have been far different.

That she was satisfied, and her pride placated, I knew, when she flashed a brilliant, tender smile at him, and said provocatively:

"How do you get that way?"

"Are you sure you wish it now?'" Her voice held a mocking lilt as she repeated his words, but she had no chance to say anything more, for Noel, disregarding Lillian and me completely, sprang toward her and caught her to him, fiercely, possessively. Patiently he was interpreting her smile instead of her words.

"Mary Mary," he said over and over again. "It's true, then. You're going to marry me right away! Oh! sweetheart! I ought not to let you do it, but it's the only way to make sure of you, and I'll never let you regret it. I swear it."

EXPECTS ROWS

"Save your breath, honey boy," Mary said flippantly, but with tenderness in her voice. "And don't run the risk of perjury. I never expect really to 'regret' this, deep down inside, any more than you will. But if you think we won't be throwing the crockery at each other occasionally, and voicing opinions that the place Sherman mentioned was better suited for making marriage than the other place—then you have another think coming, and you haven't observed life, as it is led in our best married circles."

I found myself listening breathlessly for Noel's reply, and thrilling sympathy when it came. For I feel that in this marriage, the places of the principal figures in the pattern have been reversed. Noel, I fear, has, in common with me, a tendency to take life too seriously.

Dicky's niece, on the other hand, possesses much of her uncle's charm, his refusal to take anything very seriously, his flippancy, and above all his intense joy of life.

WEDDING DATE SET

"Mary, sweetheart! Don't, don't talk that way!" he adjured her. "You know it isn't true. You know I'll worship—"

He stopped short, I guessed at a warning pinch or nudge from Mary, and evidently realized for the first time that he had an audience. His face flushed brick red, and he stammered something incoherent in an apology that Lillian promptly ignored, as she "swung into action" with her characteristic promptness and energy.

"We haven't heard yet about a wedding day," she said. "Madge, if these two young idiots can't decide upon a day, what say we name one?"

"I think that would be a very good idea," I said smiling. "I want to give them a little home wedding down at the farm, and the doctor says I shall be tied down for a week yet with this foot. Suppose we say in about two weeks? Will that be all right?"

"It is all in Mary's hands," Noel said, smiling at her, and she gave an assenting little nod.

"Suits me, all right," she said, and Lillian spoke again, this time hesitatingly.

"If you want Marion," she began, and Mary interrupted her ruthlessly.

"If I want Marion," she cried. "I won't be married without her. She promised long ago to be my maid of honor."

"Then, will you have the wedding on a Saturday?" Marion's mother asked; "unless, of course, you have some prejudice against that day. Marion's school work has been so interrupted this fall that—"

"Of course we'll have it on a Saturday," Mary cried. "Won't we, old thing?" as she turned to Noel.

"Any day you say," that adoring young man replied. And so their wedding day was settled.

Spirits of camphor will remove most fruit stains.

Did you ever try sewing on hooks and eyes with a buttonhole stitch? You will find it the most secure method you ever tried.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Wedding Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—A young lady is to be married next week. She had a birthday last week and she received as a gift a dresser set marked with the single initial of her name-to-be. Is that correct, or should her maiden initial appear on the set?

2—Does the bridesmaid stay with the bride-to-be during the entire preparation for the ceremony?

3—Does she go with her from the house to the church, or should they meet at the church? G.

1—It is considered the best form to have silver and linen and other things that are engraved or embroidered or otherwise marked before the wedding marked with the initial or initials of the bride-to-be's maiden name. But this is entirely a matter of the girl's choice, and perhaps she asked that the initial of her name-to-be be used. This is the best plan always when we give things of this kind before the wedding . . . to ask the bride-to-be what her preference is as to the marking.

2—The bride's attendant comes to the bride's home well in advance of the hour set for the marriage, to see if there are any last minute details about which she can be of service.

3—The bridal attendants meet at the bride's home, and go from there to the church.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Approach Bidding

Before the adoption of the new scoring on November 1, 1932, players everywhere realized that the possession of a part-score greatly complicated arriving at a Slam contract for the players who held that apparent advantage. With the old scoring premiums it was not considered wise to make Forcing bids above the level of game and thus many Slams were missed in bidding that were easily attainable in play. Now, however, Bridge players have at their disposal a weapon designed to meet this situation, and that is that a Forcing Opening bid of two in a suit is recognized as Forcing for one round regardless of what the score may be. This greatly lessens the difficulty of bidding for Slams with a part-score.

The two-bid with a part-score is unquestionably very valuable if players using it will use it only on hands that contain the solid values to make the contracts into which they force the partnership, and will not bid Slams on hands far too light in honors and lacking distributional value. However, there is another method of conveying a great deal of information, available to players who have a part-score. This method might be described as "creeping up" on a Slam; or, to put it in another way, "using a series of low approach bids."

A very good Contract player sent me the hand below the other day, in which, while an Opening Forcing bid of two might have been made, the alternative of keeping the bidding low and extracting the maximum of information before a game contract was reached answered an equally good purpose.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣ (1)	Pass	1 ♡ (2)	Pass
1 ♠ (3)	Pass	2 ♣ (4)	Pass
3 ◇ (5)	Pass	6 ♣ (6)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—South deliberately reverses the order of bidding, as he knows that his partner, even with no strength at all, is practically sure to respond. If, by happy chance, his response is one heart, then South can show still another suit below the level of game.

2—As hoped by South.

3—A perfectly obvious bid.

4—North, of course, has no idea of a Slam, but merely makes a choice.

5—Assured that South has adequate support for clubs, South now decides on the course of a Jump Rebid, which compels a response.

6—Perhaps an overbid by North, which may result in reaching a Grand Slam contract, but he actually holds 2 honor-tricks and South's bidding has been very strong.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Your partner has opened the bidding with one heart and the next hand has passed. You hold:

♠ 10 5 ♡ 8 6 4 2 ◇ 9 8 ♣ A J 9 5 2

What do you bid?

Answer: Two hearts. There is just about one bid to be found in this hand. The hand is strong enough in playing strength for a Raise to two hearts, and the club suit is biddable. However, the hand is not good enough to bid two clubs and subsequently raise partner's hearts, so the best thing to do is to give partner a chance in the suit where a game seems possible—that is, hearts. If you bid two clubs on this hand you are not strong enough to subsequently support partner's hearts and thus some valuable information will be withheld from him.

Household Hints

Ice Savers

Don't slam the refrigerator door. Close it securely but quietly.

Be sure the refrigerator is air tight and the door has a good catch on it.

Sending Money

Stamps are usually accepted for the fraction of a dollar. Never send personal checks to strangers. Money orders are far safer, but be careful to save the receipt until you are certain the remittance has been received.

Hair for Mending

Use a strand of hair for mending wool or silk. It makes the mend look better.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

The laced oxford is the ideal shoe for the housewife who travels the domestic beat all day, because, as it spreads from wear, it can be laced more snugly. The foot needs support. Women who wear pumps and house slippers are the ones who limp around on painful little dogs, get calloused heels, ingrowing nails. When shoes are out of shape, offer no support, their days of usefulness are over. Twinging toes make twinging tempers.

Impaired vision and postponing the day when glasses are put on sponsor certain beauty ills. They place frown furrows between the eyes, surround the soul lanterns with crepelike blemishes known as turkey tracks. Worse still, need of glasses is often responsible for headaches and nervous systems that are all of a jangle. When eyes tire easily, speed away to the eye doc.

If you want something nice to play with get an eyelash curler. It doesn't have to be heated. Gives the upward sweep that lasts for a few hours. Looks like a miniature curling iron.

Stoopnagle, Downey Returning

By AIRCASTER

It's only tentative, of course, but the likelihood is the sponsor whose product was glorified previously by Morton Downey will be back on the air within a few weeks with a three-way setup.

Arrangements already made call for a schedule via CBS for the use of a half hour on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights. Into the first spot, if the plot does not thicken, will fall a bit of entertainment from Hollywood. Into the second, those old graybeards, Col. Stoopnagle and Budd, will bob up, and into the third, Morton Downey and very probably Tony Wons. Lou Raderman's orchestra, it seems certain, will provide the musical background for all three shows.

Mr. Downey

Berle and Richman

Milton Berle and Harry Richman have made such a splash in recent weeks in Chicago theaters that they have attracted the attention of the radio bookers. On September 6, Berle will become the comedian in the spot now held by Mandy Lou with Fred Waring's Orchestra and Monsieur Richman will play a singing straight man for the Berle humor which, the radio gents assure me, will be of the type satisfactory to the Puritanical requirements of the good folks out in Kansas.

Contracts with Richman and Berle are to be for four weeks with options. The Waring program, if you recall, has brought a succession of talent in a strange parade. John P. Medbury started it and introduced Mandy Lou. Then Medbury faded. George Givot followed and did a bit with Mandy Lou, and he faded likewise, but not before bringing Bill Melia into the picture. Then, of a sudden, Melia vanished strangely. Now it is Mandy Lou's turn.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

The other day a story appeared about Gen. Johnson dashing to the NRA rescue of the waitresses.

Now I am being called upon to champion the cause of the domestic, who also wants some kind of rules formulated for her. A letter today from "working girl" complains that her employer, whose business downtown has adopted the government code, acts like he never saw a blue eagle when he's at home.

At present nothing can be done. The blanket code expressly excepts domestic service. It's the National INDUSTRIAL Recovery Act.

Other NRA letters are from people who want to report a code violation or are inquiring where such violations can be reported.

The Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh has been asked by Washington to accept all written complaints and forward them to the capital. The letters that are sent here are being turned over to the Chamber.

Remember that all businesses do not operate under the blanket 40-hour agreement. Some have a special set of regulations for their peculiar requirements, and what may appear as violations, in some instances, are not.

To facilitate the handling of complaints, familiarize yourself with the various special codes.

Right now in Washington hearings are being held for the retailers' code. This paper will carry the features of the code that is adopted.

Globe-Trotter Schedule

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Hint

You will have years to play the role of wife,
And shed your glamor, so pronounced today;
I know you plan a peaceful, ordered life
And all my fancies lean the other way;
I would not care to hurry home to you
With all the garbled trivia of the town,
For me the single life will have to do—
The slightest hint of shackles makes me frown.

With laughing children playing at your feet;
I know the years will yield you happiness,
But meanwhile, dear, why not be indiscreet?

(Please drink my wine and heed my siren song—
And take some torchy memories along!)

—Don Wahn.

Such Language!

They would have you believe it actually happened in one of the Broadway amusement temples at a premiere. An early-comer, seated down front, was reading the program in peace, only to be disturbed by a pair of tardy arrivals, who stepped on his toes getting to their seats.

"I don't mind your being dramatic critics," he snarled, "but I do object to your acting like them!"

Quiteso, Quiteso

Selma Diamond observes that because Mickey Mouse is so popular you can't call a guy a rat any more without starting him running to the nearest studio for a movie test!

Gag

It happened the other day when the Italian liner Rex was hanging up a grand ocean speed record. Naturally, a lot of good-natured rivalry exists between the two super-steamers, the Rex and the Bremen, and this friendly antagonism exists between the radio officers.

Early that Wednesday when the Rex was breaking a new record, the radio officer of the Bremen wired the Rex radio man as follows:

"When does the Rex expect to reach Quarantine?"

The red faces on the Bremen were abundant when this reply was flashed:

"We ARE at Quarantine!"

The Retort Proper

The late Arthur Rigby, a good comedian on the better circuits, had no patience with stupid orchestra leaders, either. There was the morning he got exasperated trying to make a thick-skulled leader grasp his cues.

"Don't get so loud!" snapped the leader, "what do you want for bows?"

"Applause!" thundered Arthur as he ankled off stage.

Of All Things!

One of the grander items as set forth by the Talk of the Town editors was the one about the anonymous tip to Police Headquarters which upset everyone there. The tip read:

"Raid the building at 650 Lenox ave., a sinister and suspicious structure. A huge supply of ammunition and at least five hundred rifles are stored there!"

The police with their armored cars, 20 motorcycle cops and all available gas-bombers descended on the scene at that address—only to discover that they were the victims of a practical joker.

The address, 650 Lenox Ave., is the 369th Regiment Armory!

Nice Girl, Tho'

They were babbling about a well known femme movie star, who is just as well known for her sharp fangs. In fewer words, she could cuss for 10 minutes without repeating herself.

The other day on the movie set she quarreled with a director and exploded her routine of profanity.

Ouch!

Added to our long list of Cruel Cracks from Caustic Critics is an ex-assistant reviewer's thrust, to wit.

"The scenery is beautiful—but the actors get in front of it."

How Exciting!

"I have a habit," says Lilian Harvey, the actress, to the movie magazines, "of forming impressions of people and then coining phrases to suit those impressions. I call Gary Cooper, the 'long, tall pretty one.' Maurice Chevalier is my 'charming neighbor' and a director and designer I know and with whom I dine are 'the two harmless ones.'"

You can imagine what I call Lilian Harvey.

Oop!

"Miss Gould imitated the inimitable Lenore Ulrich."

Squelch

They tell it that Zangwill, after hearing Shaw's high appraisal of himself, told reporters:

"The way Shaw believes in himself is most refreshing in these atheistic days, when so many men believe in no god at all."

Kidnaping Plot to Be Filmed

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 24.—A Hollywood kidnaping! Film stars discuss the possibility in hushed whispers, but Paramount will boldly bring one to the screen in "Miss Fane's Baby is Stolen," a short story just purchased from Rupert Hughes.

The sensational picture will depict the abduction of the child of a famous movie actress. Babe Le Roy, who captivated Maurice Chevalier and the fans alike in "A Bedtime Story," is to portray the infant whose kidnaping starts headlines screaming and inspires one of the greatest of man hunts.

Coming at a time when many stars employ bodyguards and all stand in moral fear of gangland's most fiendish racket, this picture has the timeleness that makes for hits. The Hughes short story, upon which it is based, will appear in a forthcoming issue of the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Lew Cody reports it as happening on the Marx Brothers set.

Director Leo McCarey was trying to get Groucho to do a fall. He urged: "Come on, don't you want to be a stunt man?"

Hollywood Parade: The first thing Carole Lombard did on alighting from the Reno plane was to motor out and have breakfast with Bill Powell. Fittings for her picture and the search for a house have kept her busy since. And Gary Cooper was lunching with her yesterday at the Paramount Commissary.

Doctors promise Jobyna Ralston complete health if she will rest for a month or so more. Part of this time will be spent in the mountains with a competent nurse to care for the baby.

Miss Evans

If Max Baer gets his wish, Madge Evans will be his leading woman in "The Prize-Fighter and the Lady." Newest additions to this cast are Vince Barnett (now let's see him rib) and Bill Hopper, son of Hedda, who is beginning a career in the movies.

Maj. Ernst Udet has beaued many film actresses since his arrival here for the air show, but his favorite seems to be Lilian Harvey...It's a deer hunting trip to the San Jacinto Mountains for Warner Baxter...All bets are off between Universal and Tom Brown. He'll free-lance now.

Sorry, but there isn't much more hope for the inexperienced child to get the role of Greta Garbo as a girl in "Queen Christina." The studio is still searching, but they want a youngster who has already appeared before the camera or on the stage.

Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon postcard from Wales that they will be back in Hollywood soon... Put in your order now for Mae West's forthcoming song number: "I Found a New Way to Go to Town." The lyrics are by Gladys Dubois and the music by Harvey Perry, colored composer, who played it for guests at Bob Armstrong's bachelor party for Dick Hunt..."They Call Me Sister Honky Tonk" is another swell tune in the new West film.

Coming Back

Colleen Moore returns to the screen soon in "The Power and the Glory," after a long absence.

Winchell Has Star Cast

Walter Winchell's story, "Broadway Thru a Keyhole," being directed by Lowell Sherman, will have an all-star cast of screen, stage and radio personalities including Texas Guinan, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, Constance Cummings, Russ Columbo, Frances Williams, Eddie Foy, Jr., Gregory Ratoff, Hobart Cavanaugh, Hugh O'Connell, Abe Lyman and his band, Andrew Toombs, Dewey Barto and George Mann.

Production is also under way on "Blood Money," a story of the bail bond racket, which marks George Bancroft's first starring role under a long-term contract with 20th Century Pictures and the screen debut of Judith Anderson, stage star. Frances Dee, borrowed from RKO-Radio, is prominently cast.

"Moulin Rouge," a dramatic comedy, with Constance Bennett and Tullio Carminati, Broadway star of the stage musical comedy, "Music in the Air," is next scheduled for production. Spencer Tracy and Jack Oakie will team in "Trouble Shooter" a telephone adventure story at an early date.

Harris Chain Acquires Eleventh Theater

Another theater, to be known as the Harris-Warren in Warren, O., has been added to the Harris chain, it was announced by Senator Frank J. Harris. Ken Hoel, for many years assistant publicity director of Warner Brothers Theaters, will be resident manager. Less than four years ago the Harris Amusement Company sold all their theaters and began a reorganization. Acquisition of the Harris-Warren brings the new chain up to eleven theaters in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan.

Tennis Stars On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Helen Wills Moody's narrow escape from defeat by Betty Nuthall, of England, in the National Tennis championships, is shown in vivid pictures in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, with a description of the thrilling games by the Globe Trotter. Suffering from a sprained back, Queen Helen loses the first set, the second time in seven years that this has happened. In the second and deciding set, however, Mrs. Moody displays her old form and overwhelms the British star, to win and retain her crown.

Daredevil outboard drivers are shown in sensational pictures competing in the waters of the World's Fair lagoon in Chicago for the William Randolph Hearst gold cup. Horace Tennes, of Chicago, defending champion, again wins, but not before the camera catches a spill as one of the little fellows gets caught in the backwash. Admiral Cluverius, of the Ninth Naval District, presents the trophy to Tennes.

Will Rogers, famous humorist, talks about the NRA and proposes a code for comedians. Sol Rosenblatt, code chief for the motion picture industry, declares that the whole film world is back of the recovery drive.

President Roosevelt, laying aside some of the multitudinous burdens of his office, is seen and heard on his return to his home at Hyde Park. He is met at Highland, N. Y., by his daughter, Mrs. Curtis Dahl, and his grandchildren, Sistie and Buzzie.

The Coast Guard shows that it is still active against rum runners by the capture of the magnificent yacht Felicia, in New York waters, with $75,000 worth of choice liquors aboard.

Jungle Joe, a gigantic chimpanzee, rings in on a male bathing beauty parade at Ocean City, Cal., and captures first honors.

At Dayton, Me., cow callers compete to see who has the best voice for enticing Bossy home. Not to be outdone, the farmers' wives engage in a rolling-pin contest.

(Note—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange their programs in time schedules, it is possible that some of the subjects in the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.)

'Mulfed'

Miss Pickford Writes Play

Mary Pickford flew from Chicago to New York to confer with Max Gordon and Grace Moore about a three-act musical play of her own authorship which she expects to have Gordon produce and Miss Moore star in. She has also been writing short stories and a novelette.

For her next appearance on the screen, Miss Pickford has narrowed selection down to a choice between two stories. She is also considering playing on the stage again.

Because she believes pictures should contain less dialogue and more pantomime and music, she will use dialogue only to take the place of the old printed sub-titles in her next production to be released through United Artists.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

In Which a Customer Does the Work.

"HELLO, MARK," writes T. R. "How is the old, one-fingered typist turning 'em out these days? Lying there on the cot makes it kind of tough to knock 'em off, doesn't it?

"Well, maybe I can help you out just a little. Here's one that's right up your alley. It happened to me, and I'm just healing up. I still get a touch of that funny feeling every now and then, but it isn't what it once was. So maybe I'm on the mend.

"At any rate, it was my vacation and I stepped out for a trip to the Fair, in Chicago. Having no intimates, thank goodness, I went alone. I have a good job and I went first cabin. I had a hunk to spend, and I went the ropes.

"In the Ripley 'Believe It or Not' Exhibit, I saw her. She was a pip, if ever there was one. Our meeting was just one of those things. A look, a smile and a flippant 'How have you been?' from me. And then the reply from her: 'And how have you been?'

"That was the opener, as far as we were concerned. From that moment on we saw the Fair together. She told me her name was Alice. And mine, to her, was Harry. We were two people out for a good time—and, Mark, we had it.

"It wasn't reckless, mind you, but we were having a bit of a fling. We had an understanding—or, rather, it was her suggestion that since we had met by accident, mightn't it be a good idea if we kept our respective identities to ourselves?

"'It will make our friendship that much more 'interesting,' she said. 'We like each other so very much, and there will always be that element of mystery. Let's just remain Alice and Harry—and see what the fates have in store for us.'

"Of course, Mark, instead of that being an actual suggestion, it was a gentle hint to refrain from asking questions—or else. I took the hint. For I didn't want to chance anything that might end this swell association.

"About three days of this and I found myself looking at the clock two or three hours before I was to meet her. I was always at the appointed place half an hour before time. I grew a bit sappy in my actions, but she never told me anything. We were very close—but she was just Alice and I Harry.

"You'll get this far and you'll say: 'Just another dame taking a mug for a chump.' But you're wrong, Mark. Not Alice. I spent small money for both of us, but the big amounts she insisted on splitting 50-50.

"I'd hire a car one day for some touring, and she'd drive up in one the next. Ten days of this and I was going goofy. The girl was on my mind constantly. Call it what you will, mister, dizziness, love or infatuation. Whatever it was, it was swell.

"Tiring of Chicago, we took a boat trip. We went over to Duluth—and while I never expected Duluth to be heaven, I guess it was as close to the happy spot as I'll ever get. Never were there two people whose likes and dislikes were so similar. Whatever I suggested was agreeable to her, and the same went for her suggestions to me. That was a trip.

"Well, the trip finally came to an end and we landed back in Chicago. She had to go home, she said, and all I could get from her was the fact that her home was in the East. She reminded me then of my early promise not to ask questions. And I kept that promise, even though it was one of the toughest things I ever had to do.

"She went east on the Pennsy, and I had to stop off at my firm's factory, in a city on the Century route. We said goodby—and the La Salle Street station will ever be in my memory for that heartbreaking parting.

"I couldn't help asking a question or two during that parting, and she did tell me one thing. She was not married. Although that was something of a relief to me, it served to make the situation just a little more mysterious.

"Our trains pulled out together. The Century and the Broadway run side by side for awhile, you know, and we stood throwing kisses like a couple of kids whenever we saw each other. Then her train pulled away and out of sight.

"The rest of the trip to my destination I didn't leave my room. You can rest assured that I had plenty to think about . . .

"My business finished at the factory, I returned to New York. I was back on the job and I had less time for thoughts of Alice. Although you can believe me when I tell you, Mark, that she crept into my mind's view very, very often.

"I am in the luggage business—and one morning not so long ago, a man in ministerial garb came into our place to buy some baggage pieces. He was sailing for the Far East in a few days, he said, and he wanted some trunks.

"He looked over the line and seemed definitely impressed. He ordered two for himself and then looked at one for a woman. He was going to be married that noon, he told us, and he and his wife were sailing for a remote part of China. It was his job to do a seven-year stretch of soul saving.

"He was an interesting chap, and he talked freely. He told us that he had never been in China before, and that he and his bride-to-be were looking forward to doing great work in that vicinity. His wife was going to be a great help to him, he added, because they understood each other thoroughly. Both children of ministers, they were following their parents' wishes to marry and carry on their labor of education.

"After chatting so amiably with us, he said he wasn't certain about the piece of luggage for his wife. Accordingly, he added that he would be in after the wedding that afternoon and let her pick out her own.

"They came in about five o'clock, just as I was about to leave for the day. Being busy at the time, the minister talked with one of my salesmen. A matter of extra equipment came up, and I was sent for to okay it.

"I went to them, and the world fell in. You know what I'm going to tell you, Mark. The The minister's bride was Alice.

"Mark, she never batted an eye. Momentarily, she gasped—but she recovered immediately. It was a dramatic moment. The deal was made, and they left. At the door, she turned. She flashed me a look that I will never forget. And then she was gone.

"What do you make of it? My deduction is this: Born with a desire for the worldly, she sacrificed everything for the fulfillment of a parental wish. Her trip to Chicago was a last fling—before oblivion. By the same token, her trip to Chicago was a last fling before oblivion—for me.—I may recover, but I'll never be the same.

"A small world, isn't it, Mark?"

Criss-Cross Support For Jurist Candidates

—By MARK SHIELDS—

One of the most discussed features of the present primary is the criss-cross of support for various candidates for the several places to be filled on the different courts of the county.

Mr. Shields.

There has not been yet, and probably will not be, a definite slate from any organization or faction which will receive 100 per cent support from followers. Organizations have fixed upon one or more candidates which can be certain of united backing, but in no case is there any coalition behind three candidates for Common Pleas Court, two for County Court and one for the newly-created Juvenile Court.

Orphans Court need not be discussed, because Judge Trimble will have no opposition.

The Herron regular organization is for Judge Harry H. Rowand and William H. Coleman, Republican county chairman, for Common Pleas Court. Followers of Senator Coyne are being told that the Senator does not desire the election of Judge Ralph H. Smith. Some of them are espousing Attorney Raymond D. Evans.

No One Indorsed By Mackrell Faction

But many of the regular ward chairmen loyal to Mayor Herron are receiving no such instructions regarding Smith. Some will be for Smith. Some for Alexander P. Lindsay and some for John F. Haggerty. Some will be for two of these and give no direct orders for Coleman, despite his approval by the organization.

The Mackrell faction has indorsed no one yet.

The Citizens League, supporting Councilman P. J. McArdle for Mayor, has indorsed Lindsay and Judges Rowand and Smith. The League caused some comment when it did not pick up Judge M. A. Musmanno, seeking elevation from the County Court to Common Pleas, but instead backed Judge Rowand, who in previous campaigns for public office usually has been an organization entry. This was explicable on the score that Rowand had served 10 years, and thus through precedent was entitled to re-election.

Some of Judge Musmanno's friends assert he was passed up despite his legislative record of backing social legislation because he was a foe of the Pittsburgh Coal Company in his fight for the abolition of the coal and iron police, as well as his recent activities on behalf of miners. W. P. Witherow, vice president of the coal company, is one of the League leaders, and Mrs. Templeton Smith, wife of a Pittsburgh Coal Company vice president, as well as her sister, Mrs. John O. Miller, are active in league affairs, and sat in when indorsements were being initiated.

In the last Legislature Senator Coyne introduced a bill to designate courts by numbers, and compel candidates to stipulate which place they were running for. This system might result, in this election, in a candidate who got the third highest vote not being elected to one of the three places, while a man who might have been far down the list would win because there was less opposition in the numerical court he ran for.

League Indorses Piekarski, Lencher

Coyne said the bill was introduced on behalf of "some people in Allegheny County" and opponents of it saw in it a threat to Judge Smith and an assist to Judge Rowand and Judge James R. Macfarlane had the latter been a candidate. The opposition managed to slaughter the measure.

The Citizens' League has indorsed Judges Frank A. Piekarski and Benjamin Lencher for County Court. No other major political organization has yet made indorsements for this place.

No one has made indorsements for Juvenile Court, though the Herron organization is reported to be leaning to Charles G. Lane, Jr., who has been affiliated with its activities in the past and Mackrell and his friends are backing Mrs. Lois D. McBride. Strenuous efforts are being made to keep this court out of politics because of the 250 appointments the judge can make, and which would be an excellent asset for politicians. The Citizens' League, while expressing no preference, is understood to have divided over Mrs. McBride and Gustav L. Schramm, and wound up indorsing no one, though Schramm was approved by a majority of social agencies.

Lines are all torn up on this place. One of the officials of the McArdle campaign, it is reported, is for Lane, the Herron choice.

Out in Homestead, Burgess Jack Cavanaugh is backing Judges Rowand and Smith and Mr. Coleman, though he is completely on the outs with Senator Coyne, which might cause wonder as to why he has selected two candidates supported by the Oaklander.

It would be an excellent thing if some of the judicial candidates would be a little more frank in discussing the campaign with the public. They might speak about their own records with perfect propriety, of course, and with no thought that they would be immodest. They might speak about their opponents, and say why they believed those opponents were not so well fitted for the bench.

They might discuss coldly political questions. The objection may be raised that this procedure would push elections to the bench into politics. But there could be no deeper injection of politics than is occurring in this campaign, a confused politics, it is true, which only serves to emphasize the part played by practical gentlemen.

Whatever any judicial candidate may say, politics is present, and should be discussed.

NRA MEDIATOR IN PITTSBURGH COAL STRIKE

Company Reported Accepting Board's Decision

The strike of Pittsburgh Coal Company miners at Montour No. 10 was close to settlement today with the company's reported promise to the NRA mediation board to take back two men laid off last Monday.

Spread of the strike to other mines of the company was held in abeyance until it was seen whether the mediation plan was acceptable to the 1,100 men on strike. A meeting is scheduled for this afternoon.

Milton Evans and Benson Grant, the men laid off, according to Pittsburgh Coal Company officials, were supplanted by checkweighmen elected by the men themselves. James F. Dewey, federal labor conciliator, following a telephone conversation with company officials from Washington, however, announced that the men would be taken back.

Twenty-five additional complaints of alleged discrimination will be taken up by the NRA mediation board later.

CAR CO. STRIKE SPLIT CHARGED

More than 50 employes of the Pittsburgh Pressed Steel Car Company, closed this week on account of a strike called by the Sheet and Metal Workers Industrial Union, today termed the strike a house divided against itself.

These men said they were anxious to return to work, but were prevented by pickets and union sympathizers, under leadership of John Zalonka, president of the newly formed union.

The union, which is being aided by the Unemployed Council of McKees Rocks, has demanded recognition by the company, wage boosts to the 1929 level and reinstatement of several workmen whose discharge last week precipitated the strike, according to Zalonka.

NRA CAMPAIGN MEETS CALLED

Two meetings will be held tonight to further the President's recovery drive in Allegheny County, under auspices of the Chamber of Commerce general recovery campaign committee.

Harry Bastow, president of the Allied Boards of Trade, will speak before the McKees Rocks Chamber of Commerce in Hamilton School. C. V. Shoup, secretary of the trade organization, will address the Pittsburgh Hair Dressers' Association at 8 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium.

Dr. Ralph J. Watkins, director of the Bureau of Business Research, University of Pittsburgh, will speak on "Good Business and the NRA" over Station KDKA at 8:30 p. m.

Pre-Historic Fern Topic for Young Scientist

WILLIAM C. DARRAH

Pittsburgher Joins Noted Europeans in Book-Writing

One of the youngest of American natural scientists, William C. Darrah, of Pittsburgh, has been commissioned to write two volumes on the seed fern—the papa of the present palm tree and modern fern. The seed fern existed in the carboniferous period some millions of years ago, and fossil remnants are found, now and then, embedded in coal formations here and abroad.

Darrah, only 25, and but recently graduated from the University of Pittsburgh, is a paleontologist, and has been working on the staff of Carnegie Museum and the university. He found some of the seed ferns during his expeditions into the carboniferous strata. One of his specimens was from Pittsburgh coal near Monongahela, another from Rennerdale and a third from near Fair Oaks.

The two volumes he has been asked to prepare are to fit in a series being written by European gray-bears and published by Junk & Company, in Berlin. Already 20 volumes on various scientific dips into the past have been made ready by distinguished European scientists.

Dr. W. J. Jongmans, head of the Geologic Institute of Coal Mining in Holland, made the offer to Darrah. Jongmans recently attended a geologic conference in Washington and while in Pittsburgh, was guided through coal mines and through other interesting geologic fields by Darrah.

The seed ferns are of particular scientific interest, Darrah said, because they are the antecedents of the modern flowers—sort of the missing link between the earliest and the modern.

Ferns are no longer seed bearing, he said, and the modern ones have branched off, like the seed fern, from some unknown fern-like group. The huge palm and kindred plants are more directly in line. The seed ferns have been known since 1904, he added, but no scientific summary has been made of them so far.

Darrah said he would probably spend several years preparing the works.

FLOOD CONTROL PARLEY URGES QUICK ACTION

Committee to Enlist Federal Backing Named

Flood control in the tri-state district is gaining impetus today as the result of the meeting of Mayors and Burgesses of the district held yesterday afternoon in Council chambers, City-County Building.

A committee, named yesterday by Mayor John S. Herron, is to urge the federal government to adopt a flood control project comprising a series of 10 reservoirs to be constructed in the headwaters of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers.

The committee was instructed yesterday to make every effort to have the federal government finance the entire cost of flood control. If adopted, the project will cost approximately $57,000,000 and provide 12,000,000 man-days of employment.

ON THE COMMITTEE

Serving on the committee is Mayor Gordon P. Fought, of Wheeling; Mayor J. C. McMaster, of Steubenville; Mayor J. G. Payne, of Oil City; Mayor George H. Lysle, of McKeesport; Mayor J. Fred Thomas, of Sharon; Mayor A. G. Martin, of Fairmont, W. Va.; Edward G. Lang, director of the city's Department of Public Works; George S. Davison, head of the Pittsburgh Flood Commission, and County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern.

M. L. Benedum and Joseph F. Guffey, will be requested by Mayor Herron to join the committee.

More than 100 representatives of valley towns who attended yesterday's conference were told by Maj. W. D. Styer, district engineer for the Federal government, that authorities in Washington were expressing much interest in flood control in the Pittsburgh district. Maj. Styer said that he has been assigned to make a study of the Flood Commission's plans and expects to have his study finished within the next two days. He will then make his report to Washington.

PLANS PRAISED

Maj. Styer also said that the plans are, in his opinion, the best yet submitted.

A resolution which requested that U. S. Army engineers carry out the construction of the reservoirs if the flood control plan is approved, was passed at yesterday's meeting. The resolution was presented by L. H. Gavin, secretary of the Allegheny River Improvement Association.

Another resolution which was adopted provided that each municipal official attending the conference pledge himself to point out the benefits of the project to his local civic organizations, industrial leaders and property owners. The resolution was offered by President of City Council Harry A. Little.

URGES QUICK ACTION

Mayor Herron spoke of the heavy damages paid by valley towns as the result of floods. The Mayor insisted upon quick action by the committee and pointed out that because Pennsylvania is one of the heaviest federal tax payers it should be given due consideration. Herron said that the entire project should come under national emergency public works projects.

Among others who spoke and urged support of the plan were Congressman N. L. Strong, of Brookville; Mayor Fought, Wheeling; Mayor Lyle, McKeesport, and George S. Davison.

'Ned' Fails to Lure Famous Kinsman To Game

Edward P. Mellon II, son of Thomas A. Mellon and a grandnephew of Andrew W. Mellon, is having "the time of his life" managing a sandlot baseball team.

"Ned," as he is called by members of the Mellon-Stuart Company team which he manages, is likely the richest and youngest small-time baseball manager in these parts. He is 24.

Almost any night he can be found on a diamond wearing a baseball outfit, his blue cap perched sidewise on his head. Just why he gets such a kick out of the game in preference to the sports of the blue-bloods? He says:

"I like the co-ordination and team work. It's far better than golf or tennis."

To his team Mellon is known as a "prince of a fellow" and "the democratic sort." He is always the first to congratulate a player on a good play. And throughout the game one can hear him cheering the team on to victory and to "get going, gang."

Asked if Andrew Mellon has ever seen his team in action, he said:

"No; he doesn't like baseball."

Baseball has been Mellon's favorite hobby. He wouldn't mind making a profession of it and managing a big league team, but he says:

"You have to watch that you don't lose or you have all the fans on your neck. Maybe this is better after all, for I'm having the time of my life."

DENIES BEATING BUT ADMITS QUARREL

'Handsome Dick' Says He 'Simply Shoved' Her in Fight

Richard Callahan, known as "Handsome Dick," was remanded to jail today to await further investigation in the death of Mrs. Marcella McCarthy, who, police testified, was beaten so badly she died yesterday in the Homeopathic hospital.

Callahan, a former member of the intelligence corps, United States Marines, spoke briefly at the hearing in Central Police Court. He denied beating the woman, asserting that in answering her attack with a chair, he simply shoved her.

LEARNS OF QUARREL

Homicide Sergt. Samuel Wheeler told Magistrate Thomas D. Jones that on August 13, Callahan came to the widow's house, 5560 Avondale place, intoxicated. The man and woman, who was his common-low-wife for a year and a half, he said, had a quarrel. He beat her badly on the face; her jaw was fractured and mouth torn; her limbs were black and blue from kicks, Wheeler said. Then Callahan left and did not return until he surrendered to police yesterday.

A statement from Loretta Myers, sister of the woman, was submitted by Wheeler. The sister declared:

"I was in the house with my sister August 13, when Callahan came in. He was intoxicated. I saw him strike her and knock her down. As I ran down the stairs, I heard screams and many thumps. When I returned I found her lying prostrate on the floor. She was badly bruised. She was in bed from that time until Monday night when she went out into the street and collapsed. She forbade us calling a physician or the police."

SEVERELY BEATEN

Wheeler added that the beating was very severe; that she loved Callahan and refused to have him arrested. He said that Mrs. McCarthy, before she died, told police that Callahan had administered the beating.

Callahan told Wheeler, he said, that he had agreed to break up with the woman after their quarrel and had gone to Monongahela City, returning only when he heard police were seeking him. He is a salesman.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Aug. 24.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

As I look at this NRA after having a long chat with the President about it, and Hugh Johnson, the chief executioner, Secretary of Labor Miss Perkins, senators, well-informed Washington writers, airplane pilots, taxi drivers, bell hops, steel men, oil men, and one lone optimistic bootlegger (who still believed this country would soon see the error of its ways, and return him back his stolen profession), the doubt in the scheme is in proportion to the extra money that it would cost any particular party. And even each disagreer hoped that it would work, but would prefer having it work without affecting him. Still many a big man was for it art and soul.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO FLY EIGHT DAYS AND NIGHTS WITHOUT A STOP

● FRANCES MARSALIS AND LOUISE THADEN set the world's endurance flight record for women when they brought their plane down at Curtiss Field, Long Island, after flying more than 196 hours without a stop through fog, rain, blinding sun, and pitch-black night.

● IN ADDITION to their astounding endurance flight, Miss Marsalis (Left) and Miss Thaden hold many other flying records. Miss Marsalis is the women's champion stunt flyer of the world. It takes healthy nerves to fly . . . doubly so to fly like these two young women. It is significant that both are enthusiastic Camel smokers.

● WHAT A THRILL! And how a good smoke adds to its enjoyment! Light up a cigarette. And for the sake of your nerves, make it a Camel . . . the milder cigarette that's made from costlier tobaccos.

STEADY SMOKERS TURN TO CAMELS

MISS THADEN says: "Flying is a terrific strain at times. I frankly don't know what I should do without cigarettes. But I've found that different cigarettes have different effects on my nerves. For some years I've smoked Camels. They taste better. They're much milder. And I've noticed that they never upset my nerves."

MISS MARSALIS says: "I started smoking Camels because most of my friends who were flyers seemed to prefer them. I've never changed because I can't afford to take chances with my nervous system."

Camel's costlier tobaccos do make a difference . . . in taste, in mildness. They never jangle the nerves. Your taste and your nerves will confirm this. Turn to Camels.

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. You will find Camels rich in flavor and delightfully mild.

SLEEP MALADY SPREADS TO ILLINOIS

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—As the toll from the epidemic of "sleeping sickness,, reached 22 in this city and its suburban communities, the puzzling disease was reported in another bordering state—Illinois.

Previously cases in Oklahoma and Kansas, as well as other Missouri towns had been diagnosed as encephalitis, as the disease is known in medical circles, but the ones reported during the last 24 hours at Pekin and Pleasant Hill, Ill., are the first known in that state during the current outbreak.

FOUR DIE IN DAY

The deaths of four persons here yesterday was the greatest number to succumb to the disease in one day during the epidemic which took its first victim July 30. It also surpassed the number of fatalities from the disease in the Spokane (Wash.) outbreak of 1919-21 when 19 lost their lives.

Nine new cases have been reported in St. Louis County and four in the city of St. Louis, bringing the total number since the epidemic started to 197.

Meanwhile federal, state and city medical experts are concentrating their investigation in an attempt to find a cause and cure on the possibility that insects are suspected as being possible carriers of the infection.

EXPERT CALLED

An authority on insects as disseminators of disease, Dr. L. L. Williams, Jr., medical entomologist of the United States public health service has been ordered here from Washington.

Science has never been able to learn much about the spread of encephalitis. Although there has been an unusual number of mosquitoes here this summer, it has been pointed out, however, that other epidemics of the disease have occurred in mid-winter when flies and mosquitoes could hardly have been the carrying agents.

STATE RELIEF FACES SLASH

HARRISBURG, Aug. 24.—Because the State Treasury balance has dwindled to an almost negligible figure, relief work in Pennsylvania today faced a severe curtailment for September.

A report submitted to the board by Eric Biddle, executive director, showed that while the number of families receiving aid decreased 10.1 per cent during July, expenditures dropped only 5.5 per cent.

PINCHOT URGES AID FOR NRA

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 24.—Gov. Gifford Pinchot came forth today with a formal appeal for support of the NRA and urged all Pennsylvanians to join whole-heartedly in the drive to make President Roosevelt's recovery program a success. The Governor said:

"Shoulder to shoulder, under the banner of the Blue Eagle, let all Pennsylvanians march forward to prosperity."

His proclamation explained that employers who have accepted the wage and work hour stipulations of the national recovery program would be compelled to pass some of the costs on to consumers. He added:

"I appeal to the people of Pennsylvania to accept cheerfully such higher prices as properly follow the higher cost of production, service, selling, and delivery under the NRA, but not beyond the actual increase due to the NRA."

Gov. Pinchot estimated that the higher prices have made it possible for hundreds of thousands of persons in this state to leave the breadlines and again earn their own living.

VETS JEER U. S. PENSION CHIEF

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Booes interrupted E. W. Morgan, Acting Federal Director of Pensions, as he addressed 1,200 delegates to the annual convention of the United Spanish-American War Veterans yesterday.

The assembly burst forth with booes and catcalls when Morgan said:

"The last few months have been a great strain upon those who have sympathetically and fairly tried to work out the provisions of the economy act."

William H. Armstrong, five times Mayor of Racine, Wis., was nominated without opposition as commander-in-chief. The only contest at today's election was between George A. Marshall, assistant collector of customs at San Francisco, and Robert F. Haynes, of Pennsylvania, for junior vice president.

Burglar Escapes Police During 'Tour'

OIL CITY, Pa., Aug. 24.—Richard Baker, confessed burglar of a dozen Oil City homes, escaped while officers were taking him on a "tour of inspection" of properties he had robbed. While police and Baker were examining Dr. D. M. Powers' home, Baker leaped through a window.

Death? Just Like Dream, 'Dead' Man Says

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Irving Bernstein, 21, who it was thought "died" today in Bronx Hospital, described the sensations of "death."

He said:

"It wasn't at all unpleasant. It was just like a dream—a kind of fading away. I was only vaguely conscious that I couldn't breathe."

Bernstein, suffering from a blood disease known as "purpura," paled and relaxed today as if dead, and three physicians tried in vain to detect a heartbeat. His parents, hysterical with grief, left the hospital and went home to make arrangements for the funeral.

A few minutes later the doctors injected glucose into his blood stream and stimulated his heart action until he was again breathing normally. He is now accorded an even chance of recovery.

Minister Accused Of Peach Stealing

After accepting the invitation of a friend he knew only as "Henry", the Rev. Calvin McCarroll, 50, Negro minister, of McKeesport, today stood accused of the theft of peaches from a Versailles Township farm.

The minister and two of his deacons spent the day on the farm of Walter Brown, according to a complaint before Justice of the Peace J. D. Watson. Brown said he had not given the minister permission to pick the peaches.

PASTOR TO TAKE POLICE JOB

FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—The Rev. Ernest A. Thorsell will soon do his preaching in the horizon blue uniform of a state trooper.

He is at the State Police Training School, studying jiu jitsu, pistol marksmanship and criminal law preparatory to becoming a trooper. On Sundays, however, he will park his motorcycle outside the South Foxboro Church and continue his preaching.

Loneliness and sadness that have beset him since his wife and young son died a year ago prompted him to join the force, he said. He also frankly acknowledged that the salary is an incentive because troopers sometimes make more money than ministers and no matter how eager one is to carry on with spiritual things, one must make a living.

His parishioners credit him with a "great spiritual awakening" in South Foxboro during his two years' pastorate. He also has won the praise of State Police officials who call him "good police material."

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

What folks away from home are doing is always an interesting topic to those in the city, and the Pittsburgh colony in the White Mountains is having an especially gay time.

Romaine P. Clark, who is at Crawford Notch, for several weeks, is to join other Pittsburgh folks at the Mountain View, Whitefield, N. H., soon. She gave a dinner party for several of the Soreno, St. Petersburg, Fla., colony, and among her guests were the Albert B. Craigs and Albert B. Craig Jr., of Sewickley; the George L. Craigs, also of Sewickley, and the Junior Soreno Lunds. The George L. Craigs motored to Polly's Place, Colebrook and the Balsams at Dixville Notch on Friday and to the Mountain View on Saturday for luncheon.

Concert Patron

Mrs. Arthur Hall Smith, of Pittsburgh, was a patroness at a concert Monday evening given by Merry Harn, in the eighteenth century manner at the Mountain View House, for the benefit of the Morrison Hospital in Whitefield.

Cape May, N. J., too, has its quota of folks from here. A number of them attended the midnight cabaret show in the Marine room of the Admiral Hotel on Saturday. The Thomas G. McCutcheons, the Harry Raffertys and the Donald Andersons attended with a group of 20.

The Albert Burkis, Mrs. R. K. McAllister and Mrs. Carl Seiler, all of Pittsburgh, also were there with the S. H. DeCourseys, of Germantown.

Others sojourning at the resort are the Frank E. Feigers and Helene E. Feiger, of Sewickley, and Mrs. Wesley A. Looney, who are all registered at the Admiral.

Visits Canada

On Sunday Miss Harriet Oliphant, of Edgeworth, left to attend the Century of Progress Exposition and en route home will visit her mother, Mrs. S. D. Oliphant, in Cleveland.

Sailing on the Columbus on Saturday were the F. R. Dravos, who will go to England and the Italian Lakes, to be gone about six weeks.

The Benno Jansens, of Darlington road, were recent arrivals at the Hotel Biltmore, New York.

Another addition to the debutante list is Frances Pinkney Gott, who is the daughter of the Estep Tillard Gotts, of Glen Osborne. She is to bow during the Christmas holidays at an informal tea. Just now she is at Wellesley.

The Robert Munroes, of Kentucky avenue, have gone to Ocean City, N. J., for two weeks, where they are registered at the Flanders. Registered at the same hotel are Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Albertson, of Glen Arden drive, who plan to remain until Labor Day.

Club Women Lend Antiques for Old Stone Manse

Lovers of antiques will find much to revel in when the Stone Manse in South Park is open to the County Fair public next Thursday. The old house, home of Oliver and Mary Miller who were married April 9, 1744, is interesting in itself. The Millers came from Bedford County and it was in their home that the Rev. John McMillen did the preaching which resulted in the establishment of Bethel Church in 1778.

Word would go out that there was to be preaching "at the shingled house," from which it is inferred that Oliver Miller's house was distinguished by its roof.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Miller were buried on the Rhodes property, east of Summit Park, on the Pittsburgh and Library road, the site originally chosen for historic Bethel Church, which now stands on the William Penn highway.

Every article in the house, which is being furnished in period by the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs, could tell a tale well worth hearing. An old mahogany four-poster, coverlets, a hooded crib that is more than 150 years old, candle molds, a drop leaf table, beautiful seven-branch brass candelabra, an old iron porridge pot, a mahogany cap box, wherein the grandmother of that day kept her little lace caps—these are only a few of the many in the collection.

The clubwomen hope to make the Manse a perpetual shrine, eloquent of the rich historical background of this part of the state. Already a stone water jug and a stone pitcher and two ladder back hickory chairs have been donated to it. Several of the pieces of furnishings originally belonged to the house in which they have, after so many years' absence, once more found a place.

Carrick Mothers' Club Opens Sept. 6, Honors President Oct. 4

MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Although it has four events listed for September, the Carrick Mothers' Club will not hold its president's day until October 4, which, by the way, is the only date on the Carrick calendar for that month. The September events are a reception to Carrick teachers on the sixth, a shower party at the home of Mrs. William M. McCombs on the eighth and a country fair on September 13 and 14 in Phillips Park with a corn roast on the first day and dancing later at the clubhouse. On the second day there will be cards instead of dancing.

Laura Holland MacDonald, Allegheny County director of Girl Scouts, will address the mothers in November, and Elmer Stephan, director of art in the public schools, will discuss "Madonnas in Art" atthe Christmas meeting. There is also a children's Christmas party. C. H. Lehmann, of McCann's, is to give a talk on "Modern Trends in Marketing" and a mother and daughter banquet will take place in January. The Girls' Auxiliary is to give the February program, the international relations committee will take charge in March and the educational department will sponsor a fish luncheon the same month.

Mrs. H. D. Stark, district chairman of club institutes in the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, will conduct an institute at the annual business meeting, dated for April 5. For April 19 a program by the hospitality and literary committees is scheduled, which brings the calendar to the two May events, a program by the drama department and the club choral and a party in charge of the budget and finance committee. The regular monthly meeting, the annual luncheon at the South Hills Country Club, and baby day, all in June, will round out another year. Mrs. J. R. Bradley is the new executive head.

MANY SMART ACCESSORIES MADE OF SUEDE FOR SPORTS WEAR

IF YOU go "behind the scenes" into your well-dressed friend's closet, or poke your nose into a bag fitted for a Labor Day week-end, or a wardrobe trunk being prepared for college, you'll stumble over something in suede, sure enough. This leather is synonymous with sports in the spring and the fall, and now grows more and more familiar on the streets.

* * *

IF YOU'RE planning either a vacation or college wardrobe, you'll need something in suede—most important of all, a jacket. Not your old one, for there is much that is new about the fall models. If it is chilly, the suede jacket may be worn over tweeds, over heavy woolens. You can lunch in it, drive to town, or walk to market in it on cool mornings—autumn mornings are cool! You can shop in it, for the new suede jacket is often sold as a suit transformer, or in other words, as an extra little jacket to alternate the appearance of your favorite tweed suit. It is cut with beautiful detail, with many intricate seamings and new ideas, as epaulets on the shoulders (sketched), sunburst tuckings, wide interesting yokes, and such.

WITH these you wear a suede hat, preferably a fedora, if you're that type. If you're not, pick out a little beret-type, tug it sharply over one eye, lift it slightly in back and make sure a feather ornament perches coyly somewhere near the front.

ANOTHER idea for that new fall suit: If the day is too cool for just a suit, and not cool enough for a suit and topcoat, try a little vest of suede under the jacket. One, with wide triangular closing, is fastened by smart wooden buttons.

IT'S A FALLACY to say that Englishwomen have it over Americans for sport clothes. That's not true today, if it ever was. Our sport clothes stand comparison with any. An American coutourier who takes her collections to Paris from year to year, designed a shirtwaist of deep mahogany brown cut exactly like a man's shirtwaist—even to the bone cuff links at the wrist, to be worn tucked into a skirt as illustrated, or outside, with a belt. Her suede fedora is a masterpiece of subtle crown manipulation.

* * *

BELTS and bags of suede are stunning with tweeds too. Twin-sets of bag and shoes are worth looking into. A particularly good-looking set is sketched, as well as the cleverest belt we've stumbled into in some time. Sole leather, untouched, undyed, completely in its native form, makes the buckle. Somebody's bright idea.

CHICAGO GANGS NOW PREY ON BUSINESS

Editor's Note—This is the third and final article of a series dealing with the gangster-racketeer situation in Chicago.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—Dwight H. Green, young and aggressive United States attorney for Chicago, believes the crime situation in Chicago has improved "to some extent" since Al Capone became convict 40,886 at Atlanta Federal Penitentiary.

But, Green declares, the business men of Chicago are confronted with a serious problem because of the development of racketeering in legitimate businesses.

Green said:

"Gangs are devoting their time to racketeering on business instead of booze and the gangster is in the business racket very extensively."

Green, who played a leading role in the prosecution of Capone, called attention to the fact that Chicago's new "public enemy No. 1," Murray Humphries, is not only under federal indictment for attempting to evade a tax in 1929 and 1930, but is also under indictment in a state court for racketeering.

BRAINS OF MOB

Humphries, the new gang lord of Chicago, didn't rate particularly high when Capone's organization — now broken up — was functioning full blast. But he is now regarded as "the brains" of the remnants of the old Capone mob.

From booze Humphries moved into other businesses—cleaning and dyeing, laundry, linen supplies and, according to Green, possibly in carbonated beverages.

Green said:

"Humphries was becoming a Capone of another type at the time we indicted him. He is now under cover. Where he is I don't know. I wish I did."

Green explained that one of the pet methods of the racketeer seeking to control a legitimate business is to first get hold of the distribution end. Either the racketeer and his cohorts obtain control of the drivers' union, Green explained, or they make a businessman's life miserable through unpleasant, "strong arm" competitive methods.

The District Attorney declared:

"Racketeering can only be broken up by complete co-operation betwen the businessmen who are preyed upon and the prosecuting authorities — both federal and state."

TELLS OF CAPONE

In Green's opinion, Chicago has no "second Al Capone." Humphries has nowhere neared Capone's dubious underworld status and power.

Commenting upon Capone whom he helped prosecute, Green said:

"Capone was the most powerful underworld figure Chicago, or any other city, has ever seen —or ever will see again. He rose to power through brute strength and terrorism, through the use of guns and through ruthless killings.

"Having reached a powerful position he was 'used' as a 'front man' by men who were more or less brainy but of the scheming, conniving type. They sought to carry on their illegal enterprises by hiding behind Capone. They had everything blamed on Capone while they were at the same time supplying him with money.

"Capone did their bidding. If they wanted anyone 'put away,' it was done and they would have it appear through statements that Capone ordered it done.

"I am convinced Chicago will not again have to contend with 'another Capone.'"

POPEYE'S PARTY TOMORROW

Tomorrow is Popeye's Birthday and it is going to be celebrated in a big way out at Kennywood Park. Popeye is going to give a party for all of the boys and girls of Pittsburgh and vicinity and it is expected that 7,000 or 8,000 youngsters will be on hand to greet their favorite of the Sun-Telegraph comic pages.

The big event of the day will be the cutting and distribution of the monster 250-pound birthday cake donated by Rhea's. This cake has been on display in Rhea's Market street window for two days and there has been a crowd in front of it all of the time.

About 5,000 strips of free tickets for the rides and attractions have been distributed by the Sun-Telegraph—just enough to make it a safe and comfortable crowd for kiddies. Fifteen-cent street car passes are on sale at all of the places listed elsewhere in the Sun-Telegraph today and Sun-Telegraph coupons for the free Kennywood tickets can also be exchanged at these places.

Popeye says he is going to give the kiddies the swellest birthday party ever held in Pittsburgh. He'll be seein' you tomorrow!

MEDICAL LIQUOR CONSUMPTION TAKES LEAP

After repeal — what? Will there be an adequate supply of liquor? What will it cost? These questions are answered in a series of four articles, of which this is the third.

By ARTHUR HACHTEN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Consumption of medicinal liquor from bonded warehouses has increased by leaps and bounds since Congress at its recent session passed the Celler bill removing restrictions on physicians' prescriptions.

Freed from the limitation of one pint in 10 days to each patient, physicians are finding a greater demand for their prescriptions.

Withdrawals of whisky from bonded warehouses totaled 300,000 gallons since July 1, Dr. James M. Doran, commissioner of industrial alcohol disclosed. The withdrawal curve is still upward. It is at the rate of 3,600,000 gallons annually.

Last year only 750,000 gallons were withdrawn.

'SICKNESS' GAINS

Dr. Doran smilingly remarked:

He added, seriously:

"The withdrawals have been a good thing. I doubt that more whisky is being consumed for illness than before the Celler bill was passed. I believe ailing persons are transferring their purchases from bootleggers to physicians."

Prices for medicinal liquor have skyrocketed along with the increased supply at disposal of the physicians, druggists and other purveyors.

PRICE JUMP SEEN

Here the price has jumped from $2 a pint on June 1 to $2.50 and there were reports of a boost to $3 a pint likely to go into effect shortly.

Arguments given for advancing prices is that the supply must be conserved, but that brought a laugh to prohibition enforcement officers. They think the law of supply and demand is operating and the rule of all the traffic will bear is being invoked.

Others speculated on the possibility that the whisky interests are preparing for prohibition repeal and higher prices after the states have accomplished that achievement.

Wilkinsburg P.T.A. To Help Pupils Get Clothing

The welfare committees of the Wilkinsburg Parent-Teacher Associations under the general chairmanship of Mrs. C. B. Stewart are co-operating to assist students of the community who are in need of clothing. Each committee will be in its respective school building on Monday from 12 o'clock until 4 to take orders for the clothing which will be supplied by the Red Cross.

Only children who must have clothing in order to attend school when it opens will be taken care of. Those pupils entering Junior High will be outfitted at that school. After the opening of school, clothing will be distributed once a week, as in former seasons.

Primo Carnera Here.
Fans to Judge Him.
And Decide Status.

BOXING RULES UNDERGO CHANGES

A false alarm. Can't fight a lick. Muscle-bound and can't hit. Just a big, good-natured giant who has been exploited circus style into the title.

Primo Carnera

The gentlemen referred to are, strange to say, one and the same, Primo Carnera, the heavyweight champion of the world, who recently gained the crown when Jack Sharkey folded up in the sixth round after winning easily throughout the first five rounds of their battle in the Long Island City Bowl.

The description that applies to him depends upon the viewpoint. Some there are who can't see the big fellow. They may be blinded by prejudice, backed up by the memory of the setups fed Primo when he first invaded these shores and was routed from town to town, leaving a cry of "fake" ringing in his wake. To others, and especially the loyal Italian followers of boxing, he is the hero of the ring, a worthy champion, Premier Mussolini's pride and joy.

Well, they say it's difference of opinion that makes a hoss race. And almost everything else. If there hadn't been a lot of doubt in the minds of some people about Ted Yarosz' ability to beat Vince Dundee, and in the minds of others that Dundee could stave off the rush of the Monaca youngster, there wouldn't have been that record crowd at Forbes Field last Monday night to see Pittsburgh's fistic Battle of the Century.

So it is with the Primo's invasion of Pittsburgh for an exhibition of four rounds against two sparring partners in the North Side Stadium tomorrow night, under the auspices of the St. Peter's A. A., with Art Rooney acting as promoter. Despite the fact that the Dundee-Yarosz fight drained the pocketbooks of the fight fans and they can ill afford to patronize two big shows within five nights, the moderate seating capacity of the Stadium should be well filled.

FANS TO JUDGE PRIMO FOR THEMSELVES

The fans will come to judge of Carnera for themselves. They have heard that he is a bum and that he is not a bum, fistically speaking, of course. They may not get much of a true line on his ability in a sparring match, but they at least will get a look-see at one of the biggest men ever to succeed in the ring, and they can go home and scare the kids with stories of the big giant roaming the land who will get them if they don't keep up in their studies when they return to school shortly.

If a cat will permit itself to be bereft of all nine of its lives by curiosity, Mr. and Mrs. Fan certainly have the right in this noble land of the brave and the free to look at a Man Mountain if they want to.

Exhibition matches seldom have drawn well here. Max Schmeling and Jack Dempsey drew just a little less than $4,000 at Motor Square Garden some months ago, and a return engagement by Dempsey with Max Baer, exactly one week after the Coast heavyweight had knocked out Schmeling for a big upset of the dope, grossed only half of that at the Meyers Bowl.

So what? So no one expects anybody to be breaking down fences trying to get in to see Carnera strut his exhibition stuff, but there ought to be a sufficient number of the faithful and the curious to fill the arena in which he will appear. If he were actually fighting, that would be something else again.

Carnera is performing for his expenses only and donating what normally would be his purse to the needy of the North Side, for which the St. Peter's shows are held. It is a splendid gesture, made on behalf of Rooney, who has a "piece" of the big fellow. On this basis alone, the show merits more consideration from the fans than the usual run of exhibitions.

REAL "WHO'S WHO" OF BASEBALL PUBLISHED

A work that fills a long-felt need in the libraries of sportsdom is just off the press and gets its review here. It is a beautifully printed and bound "Who's Who in Major League Baseball," edited by Harold (Speed) Johnson and Harry Neily, nationally-known veteran baseball writers, and published by the Buxton Company, of Chicago.

The book contains a complete history and photograph of every major league player and official, pictures and sketches of baseball writers, sports radio announcers, umpires, stories and pictures of such immortals as Honus Wagner, Nap Lajoie, Christy Mathewson, Chief Bender, et. al., rules and history of the sport, and, in short, is nothing less than an encyclopedia of baseball. It is the finest thing in its line that ever has come to this desk, containing 700 photographs and filling 544 large-sized pages and selling for only $3. A bow to the publisher and the editors of this volume.

VINES ON SPOT IN NATIONAL TOURNEY

The tumble of Ellsworth Vines, Jr., from the tennis heights in a single season has the people on the inside of the racket (joke) doing considerable talking among themselves. The latest crash of the gangling national champion occurred a few days ago, when Frank Shields defeated him in the final round at Newport. When the news reached Forest Hills, where the women's national tournament was under way, the spectators applauded lustily. One of the officials is said to have remarked:

"Vines will have to come through in the national tournament next month and retain his title, or at the rate he's sliding he'll be lucky to make the first 10 on his season's play."

NEW YORK REVISES RULES OF BOXING

The addition of such a practical boxing man as Bill Brown to the New York Athletic Commission, as the successor of the late William Muldoon, has brought about a complete overhauling of the book of rules for the conduct of the sport in that state, copies of which will be ready shortly.

One of the changes kicks out the rule against holding with one hand and hitting with the other. This rule has been violated in almost every bout, referees have been lenient in their enforcement of it, and it is rather unimportant, anyway. Realizing it cannot be successfully enforced, the commission wisely decided to drop it.

Another change in the rules permits the promoters to pay more than 50 per cent for a main bout. Hitherto they have been doing this surreptitiously. Unable to halt the practice, the commission does away with hypocrisy by removing the restriction.

Digging into the wrestling code, the commission decided to make all grapplers wear shoes in the ring and to permit all head, toe and scissors holds. Butting with the head and kicking are barred out, however, and the commission could go further by killing the flying tackle. The changes made all seem to be justified and dictated by common sense.

CARNERA SHOW OFF UNTIL TOMORROW

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Chuck Woods vs. Johnny Jaeger and Soldier Dombrowski vs. Holman Williams, 8 rounds each, Dearborn, Mich.

Drizzling rain which gave no promise of an early letup today caused postponement of the Primo Carnera exhibition boxing show in the Allegheny Stadium, scheduled for tonight.

The show will go on positively tomorrow night. If the bad weather continues, it will be switched to the indoors to the Arena on the North Side, Art Rooney, the promoter, said in announcing the postponement.

Carnera arrived in Pittsburgh shortly before noon from Youngstown, where he performed last night, and stopped first at Rooney's home on the North Side. From there he went to his headquarters in the Fort Pitt Hotel. Tomorrow was an open date on the heavyweight champion's touring schedule, so that he did not hesitate to agree to the postponement.

A regular card of bouts will back up the Carnera exhibition. Billy Holt, local Negro welterweight, and Phil Ross, of Chicago, box the six-round main bout.

Due to injuries suffered by the two Zelano brothers, there have been some revisions in the preliminary card. Heebie Thomas takes the place of Mickey Zelano against Johnny Durso and a Young Dixon-Andy Kosel bout has been arranged to substitute for one between Joey Zelano and Johnny Toran. Mike Barto and Johnny Birek are in the other four-rounder, and Patsy Hennigan meets Dominic Mancini in the six-round semi-final.

Between Rounds

Frankie Goosby's fight with Jimmy Taylor in Cleveland will be staged next Tuesday night.

Al Demedowitz, W. & J. athlete scored two knockouts in one night to win the heavyweight honors in an amateur tournament in Brooklyn, his home town last week.

Charley Massera, Monongahela heavyweight, who has been coming along in fine style in New York, boxes Steve Hamas at Humbert Fugazy's Coney Island Bowl next Tuesday night.

Freddie Miller, N. B. A. featherweight champion, meets Lew Feldman, of New York, in a non-title bout in Cincinnati, next Wednesday night.

Dick Ambrose, East Liberty welterweight, former amateur star, who beat Pete Fleming, of Hot Springs, in his first professional bout, is seeking matches. Ralph Martzo is handling him.

Jimmy Thomas and his manager, Abie Wirz, will leave here by automobile Saturday for Jimmy's return bout of 12 rounds with Bobby Leitham in Montreal next Wednesday night. Leitham recently returned from a trip to England, where he engaged in several bouts. Thomas won a decision over him at the Arena here last winter. The winner of the Montreal bout will meet Pete Ramstel.

The latest promoter to put in a hot bid for Ted Yarosz's services is Billy Anes, of Boston's Madison Square Garden, who wants to make a match with Lou Brouillard for the middleweight title.

BASEBALL COMEDY

By NICK ALTROCK

Nick Altrock

DETROIT, Aug. 24.—Speaking of hiding incandescent light bulbs under a bushel basket, there's practically a one-man ball team now operating under the wicker-work. I refer to Mr. Red Lucas, pitcher and swatter of the Cinci Reds. On account of His Royal Redness working for a club that always dives into the cellar like a Scotchman descending a bargain basement, he does not get the tumble that would be accorded him on a Grade A team. But Lucas still keeps making the old college try when the rest of the Cinci varsity athletes are apparently enjoying a summer vacation.

Red not only has pitched gilt-edge ball, but in the last five years he has spanked the spheroid for better than .300. But as long as he loiters in Cincinnati he is bound to be like the mushroom that blooms unseen and is always being stepped on.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Marshalled by two of the college gridiron's craftiest strategists, the all-stars of East and West clash under the arc lights of Soldier Field tonight.

Coach Howard Jones, of Southern California, will lead the forces of the West, recruited entirely from the Pacific Coast stars of the past two years, while Coach Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, employing the Warner system of attack with football aces of the Middlewest and South, guides the destinies of the East.

Upwards of 35,000 spectators, many of whom already have witnessed dream games in baseball and polo this summer around Chicago, are expected to watch the duel of the stars. It was the one game that both coaches long have sought to stage.

On the basis of past reputations, Coach Hanley probably had an edge in first ranking stars for the battle but the Westerners were slight favorites to win. Listed on the probable starting lineup of the West were seven former stars of Southern California football fame, all well versed and schooled in the celebrated Jones system of manufacturing touchdowns. Five former Trojans were posted along the front line and two more in the backfield.

Youngstown Fans See Champ Carnera

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Primo Carnera boxed four exhibition rounds on a fight card here last night, two with Frank Edgren, of Cheyenne, Wyo., and two with Harold Mays, Bayonne, N. J. Carnera weighed in at 261 to Edgren's 195½ and Mays' 205¼.

DOUBLEHEADER CARDED FOR TOMORROW

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Continued wet weather kept the Pirates and Giants apart this afternoon, it being the second day in succession that a doubleheader between the two clubs has been prevented by the elements. New York officials called off the sport about 1 o'clock.

The turn of events has jammed up the playing cards of the two teams. Five games are listed in the present series, yet even if the clubs are able to run off bargain bills, scheduled for tomorrow and Saturday, one contest will have to be transferred to Pittsburgh.

The league leaders are slated to visit Pittsburgh right after Labor Day. They will be at the home of the Buccos for four days at that time, and any game or games not played in the present series here will automatically be switched to Forbes Field.

Pitchers Sought

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Baseball followers without number, whose loyalty to the Pirates is something to be highly commended, are now convinced that the crying need of the Pittsburgh club is two or three pitchers with "stuff" and pitching sense.

Aside from French and Chagnon the Pirate first-string hurlers cannot match the fast-ball skill of the staffs owned by the Giants, Cubs, Braves and Cardinals, the four teams which, with the Pirates, aspire for the flag.

RIVAL PILOT LIKES CHAGNON

Chagnon has been pretty much of a "bust" all year, but at least one manager of a club in the flag fight would like to have the boy with the speed and fast ball. Leon, in two or three starting attempts, failed to show the exceptional skill he displayed as he reeled off 10 victories last season and these bad starts cost him a job in the select group this season. Nevertheless he has two of the essentials necessary to championship pitching—speed and a fast-breaking curve.

Pirate officials will soon get first hand reports on new players from the club's principal sleuths—Bill Hinchman and Carleton Molesworth, who have been on scouting expeditions for many weeks. Hinchman, the senior Sherlock Holmes, is on his way back from the Pacific Coast where he spent almost a month in studying several players on whom the Pirates have designs.

SCOUTS COMB MINOR BELTS

Hinchman, however, had a stopover privilege on his ticket, and he jumped off the rattler in Texas to survey the Class A circuit of the Lone Star State. Bill was especially anxious to land a pitcher or two. From Texas, Bill continued on into American Association territory, where he is at present engaged. He is due to show up at the home office any day.

MEN'S, WOMEN'S NET TOURNEYS POSTPONED

PLAYERS IDLE AT LONGWOOD, FOREST HILLS

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 24.—The tennis officials directing the national doubles championship at Longwood won a costly victory over fog and rain as they drove the field into the quarter-finals.

Although playing under decidedly adverse conditions, as far as American tennis is concerned, Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill, the defending titalists, yesterday managed to lead their strongest rivals into the round of eight. But the price of this competition was a high one, for the players scuffed and tore the velvety courts as they lost their footing in the greasy downpour, causing so much damage that today's program had to be postponed to permit hasty repairing.

The premier Australian team, Jack Crawford and Vivian McGrath, the two-fisted backhand swinger, stopped Berkley Bell and Gregory Mangin, the fifth seeded domestic pair, in 6-3, 6-3, 7-5, nor when Fred Perry, British Davis Cup ace, and chunky Frank H. D. Wilde, overwhelmed Clifford Sutter and Eugene McCauliff, national indoor champion, 6-4, 6-3, 14-12.

QUIST, TURNBULL WIN

The other Aussies, Adrian Quist and Don Turnbull, played in decisive fashion to trounce Henry Culley and Joe Coughlin, the young Californians, by a 6-3, 6-2, 6-4 margin, and S. P. Young and D. S. Freshwater, the British collegians, managed to get three match points on Frank X. Shields and Frankie Parker before that fourth-seeded American team clinched its 6-0, 6-8, 8-6, 4-6, 7-5 victory.

The slamming tactics of George Lott and Lester Stoefen, except in the 22-game third set, were highly efficacious against Arnold Jones, Providence, and Lindley Tiers, Cooperstown, N. Y., overcome by 6-1, 6-3, 10-12, 6-3, and the young Los Angeles pair, Jack Tidball and Gene Mako, cut loose in lusty fashion several times as they cut England down by one team by eliminating H. G. N. Lee and E. R. Avory, 7-5, 5-7, 8-6, 6-1.

A default moved S. Jaris Adams and H. H. Bassford, of New York, defending champions into the semi-finals of the veterans' play.

WOMEN REMAIN IDLE

It was the fourth successive postponement, the fifth of the tournament, and will set back the finals until Saturday, just a week after they were scheduled to be held.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: LITERATURE AND PATERNITY—Andre Tiraqueau, famous French governor and jurist, 1480-1558, gave his country a book and a child every year for the last 30 years of his life. Fourteen of these books are still in existence, and 11 of his children married celebrities of French history. Tiraqueau was a stern teetotaler, "but for which"—a contemporary poet said—"he would have filled the world with books and Tiraqueaus."

TOMORROW: THE GREAT TRAPSHOOTING UPSET

LOCAL WOMEN STARS LEAVE FOR CHICAGO

By TOM BIRKS

The mixed foursome event scheduled for the Highland Country Club this afternoon was called off because of threatening weather. It will be staged next Thursday.

James T. Lappan, the Pittsburgh Field Club veteran, flashed some of the golf that recently won him the club championship, when he paced a large field to win the low gross prize in the fifth and final Pennsylvania state one-day tourney at the Fox Chapel Club yesterday.

Lappan, battling a tough wind, shot a 38-38—76 to lead home Jimmy Ramsey, of Highland, and W. H. Evans, of Fox Chapel, who finished with 79s.

BRAND BLOWS UP

W. H. K. McDiarmid, of Alcoma, and C. M. Scott, of the Field Club, went into third place with 81s; M. A. Knoer, of Highland, won low net prize with a 65.

Fred Brand, Jr., of the Shannopin Club, had the unusual experience of taking 10 shots on one hole, on the sixteenth, a par 4 hole. At that he finished with an 84.

Homer Hochberg, home club star, won the low gross award at the third annual tournament of the Syria Temple A. A. O. N. M. S. at Alcoma yesterday, scoring a 75. Al McBride, South Park professional, finished second with a 77.

FOUR IN DEADLOCK

Four players finished in a deadlock for the trophy offered by Potentate John G. Daub, which must be won thrice to gain permanent possession. Perry Del Vecchio, Alex McLain, W. C. Brown and S. S. Hunt each carded a net 70.

The second division low gross award was won by R. F. McCree and F. W. Waldren with 91s, and the low net went to R. R. Anderson with a 62.

H. D. Harbison and Victor Shoop topped the third flight scorers with 106.

The prize for the greatest number of birdies went to Dr. H. Hertzog, who had two. S. S. Hunt, A. S. Duncan and W. D. Mansfield also had two, but Dr. Hertzog won the draw.

The kickers' handicap honor was shared by Bob Braun, H. C. Lowndes, J. W. Simmonds, J. S. Anderson, C. H. Weber, A. W. McClain, W. D. McClelland, W. D. Mertz and R. Knox, each having a 71.

ANDY MATTIS DIES FROM POISONING

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 24.—Poisoning, resulting from the extraction of a tooth, has caused the death of Andrew Mattis, of Brownsville, Pa., star pitcher of the Johnstown Club of the Mid-Atlantic League. Mattis died here yesterday, despite a series of blood transfusions Tuesday. Funeral services will be held Saturday at the deceased's home in Brownsville.

Mattis first played professional baseball with the Jeannette club of the Mid-Atlantic League several years ago. He later played at Altoona and Beaver Falls.

While at Beaver Falls he was purchased by the Pittsburgh Pirates and sent to the Independence, Mo., team of the Western Association. He joined the local club this season.

M'EWAN SIGNS AS COACH

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Christian Keener (Red) Cagle, new co-owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Football League, has announced he has signed Capt. John E. McEwan, his former Army coach, to coach the Dodgers during the coming season.

McEwan coached the Cadets in 1925, the year Cagle was breaking in, went from there to Oregon and last fall ended a two-year regime at Holy Cross, leaving the team in mid-season after a disagreement with the athletic authorities.

South Park County Fair Card Varied

The athletic carnival to be held in connection with the South Park County Fair, September 2, will feature track and field events for both men and women. The men's events include 100, 200, 400, 800, 1,500 and 10,000 meters runs and a 1,500-meters relay. Field events to be staged are the pole vault, high jump, broad jump and shot put. For boys 16 years of age and under, there will be a 50 meters run, 400 meters relay, high jump and broad jump.

Events for girls and women are as follows: 50, 100 and 200 meters runs, 400 meters relay, baseball throw, high jump, broad jump and javelin throw.

RAIN HAMPERS NET EVENTS

Hopes for continuation of play today in the tennis tournaments at South Park and at Stanton Heights were virtually abandoned at noon. Early morning rains left the courts in such condition that no matches could be played before evening, and then only in the event a bright afternoon sun dried the playing surfaces. No afternoon sun was in prospect.

No matches were played at South Park yesterday, and Frank Broida, of the Edgewood Club, defeated Bob Lampus, of Shannopin, 6-2, 25-23, in the only duel disposed of at Stanton Heights.

Second and third round matches in men's singles have been scheduled at South Park tomorrow.

Honus to Form Sandlot Grid Loops

A meeting will be held at the Wagner-Traynor store, 709 Liberty avenue, at 7:30 this evening to form independent football leagues for the season.

Ray Merriman will be in charge pending the return of Wagner himself from the East with the Pirates.

JOHNSTON TO COACH

Legion Tourney Teams Play Tie

SPRINGFIELD, O., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—With the score tied, 9 to 9, darkness halted the American Legion baseball teams from Springfield, O., and Mobile, Ala., late yesterday in one semi-final game of the legion's eastern sectional tournament here. The teams played nine innings.

In an earlier semi-final, Trenton, N. J., nosed out Gastonia, N. C., 4 to 3.

The tie game forced revision of the tournament program. Springfield and Mobile will play off their deadlock today with the final contest to determine the East's entrant in the "little world series" at New Orleans set for tomorrow.

BRAVES ADVANCE TO THREATENING POSITION

COMING SERIES WITH GIANTS BIG TEST

Associated Press.

Rapidly getting into a position where their six-game series to be played in four days with the New York Giants, a week hence, can rightfully be called "crucial," the Boston Braves today trailed the league leaders by only six and one-half games.

While the Giants, together with other teams of the National League, were being rained out for the third straight day, the Braves yesterday chalked up their fifth successive victory at the expense of the St. Louis Cardinals, winning, 4 to 3.

BERGER HITS TWO

Wally Berger, 28-year-old outfielder, was the big noise. He blasted out two circuit blows, his twenty-third and twenty-fourth of the season, and they accounted for all of the Braves' runs. They also sent him one up on Chuck Klein in the battle for home run honors in the National League.

In the American League, the Washington Senators gained a halfgame on the New York Yankees, increasing their margin to eight full games. While the Senators were dividing a doubleheader with the Detroit Tigers, the World Champions dropped a close decision to the Cleveland Indians.

Tommy Bridges, the Tigers' brilliant right-hander, pitched and batted Detroit to a 2-to-1 decision in the first game, but in the nightcap the Senators slugged Fred Marberry, and his successors, often and hard to win, 9 to 5. While holding the league leaders to seven scattered blows, Bridges drove in the first run with a single and then with the score tied in the ninth connected with a triple that led to the deciding tally. Alvin Crowder opposed Bridges.

BROWN HURLS WELL

Clint Brown outpitched Charley Ruffing to give the Indians their 2-to-1 victory over the Yankees. He scattered the Yanks' six hits over five innings while his mates got to Ruffing for two runs in the fourth, putting them together with two bases on balls and a double by Milton Galatzer and Harley Boss' single.

Two great pitching performances on the part of Sam Jones and Ed Durham gave the White Sox two victories over the Red Sox and extended Boston's losing streak to nine games. Jones held the Sox to three hits in the opener, while Durham pitched four-hit ball in the second affair. He was deprived of a shutout only when Red Kress and Al Simmons, who got only one hit in seven times at bat, errored after two were out in the ninth.

OUIMET'S GOLF

By FRANCIS OUIMET

Former National Amateur and Open Golf Champion

The more I play golf the more convinced I am that chip shots are responsible for low scores, that is, assuming that they are played skillfully and accurately. In winning the United States Open this year, Johnny Goodman proved that there is a measure of truth to the statement because his chipping was so consistent he had little to do in the way of putting. And on slippery putting greens many fine players would prefer a chip shot to the long approach putt because the chip shot can be controlled somewhat better than the approach putt from a distance, which calls for great judgment of pace as well as direction.

Francis Ouimet

One of the major faults with golfers in playing a chip shot is this. They do their chipping with too many clubs. First perhaps they employ a No. 3 iron. Under exactly the same conditions their next effort will be with a No. 5 iron. Before the round is completed the chances are they have tried to chip with every club in their bag and each one has had a different effect upon the ball. A friend of mine with whom I play a great deal of golf has earned for himself the reputation of being a star in chipping a ball close to the hole from the edge of the green or out 10 or 15 yards.

STICK TO ONE CLUB

He has practiced assiduously and has got the shot down fine. Regardless of the conditions, with few exceptions he uses his No. 7 iron to do this work and very rarely shifts to another club. His reasons are sound. With a stiff wrist, he strikes his ball crisply each time and the action of the ball always is the same.

"I use a No. 7 iron because it best suits my own methods; maybe a No. 4 might be safer in the hands of another, but I have developed the chip with the No. 7 because I know just what to expect each time. Should I shift or change to some other club I would be obliged to play a different stroke and you cannot mingle too many ideas into any shot and play with confidence."

So he says, and I must agree with him 100 per cent.

As I remember Jerry Travers' play, he was most adept at laying the ball near the hole from a distance just off the putting green. I have seen him deliberately play short of a green just for the purpose of leaving himself a chip with a jigger, a club that is more or less obsolete, but nevertheless one which Jerry used with rare skill.

To show that the best players differ in the clubs they use for such shots take the case of Gene Sarazen. He does his pitching with one of his specially-designed pitching wedges. And yet when he nears the edge of a green he uses the same club. Few realize or give big Jesse Guilford the credit that is due him when it comes to playing a chip shot. He is looked upon as a giant of a fellow who pummels the daylights out of the ball from the tee, a miracle worker getting out of trouble, but, in the final analysis, his low scoring comes as a result of a beautiful chip shot and a deadly putting stroke. Guilford pins his faith on his mashie, and I must say he does a fine job with it.

CHIP SHOT STROKE SAVER

There are still others who prefer a straighter-faced iron but, boiling the subject down to a few words, it matters little which club is finally selected, provided the player uses that club to the exclusion of all others. I suppose in the ordinary course of events the average player will find himself just short of greens more often than he is on. If this is correct, then he must protect himself with a good chipping stroke or else he is wasting strokes here and there, all of which tend to build up his total, to say nothing of disturbing him mentally.

Earlier in this article I spoke of a friend who used his No. 7 for practically all chip shots. The other day, over a tough layout, he scored a 73, which was one over par. On 11 greens he had but one putt. Three of these came as a result of splendid recovery shots out of traps. The other eight one-putt greens came after excellent chip shots. Let us say four of the eight had been badly played and required two putts after the chip had been played. This would have tucked four strokes onto the 73 and his score would then be 77. A good score, therefore, would have been transformed into a fair one, so you can readily see the value of the stroke-saving chip.

Another Equipoise Victory Today Seen

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—(INS.)—Equipoise goes to the post a possible 1-to-5 favorite against six other horses today in the $25,000 added Gold Cup age event race at Hawthorne.

A field of seven horses, in addition to the great C. V. Whitney 5-year-old, in the overnight entries included Big Brand, Gallant Sir, Plucky Play, Indian runner, Jim Dandy and Mr. Khayyam. Plucky Play and Gallant Sir were coupled as the N. W. Church entry.

Equipoise will be racing for his sixth straight victory of the season. Turfmen here generally concede that no horse in today's race will have so much as a ghost of a chance with the great handicap champion.

EMPIRE STATE GUNNER WINS SHOOT TITLE

VANDALIA, O., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—In some of the closest contests the Grand American handicap trapshoot tournament has experienced for many years, class championships were settled yesterday with more than 400 marksmen taking part.

Shootoffs were necessary to decide many of the winners and firing continued well into the twilight hours.

Elmer Torge, of Wales Center, N. Y., was acclaimed the class AA champion, but not until he had bested two other crack marksmen, Mark Arie, of Champaign, Ill., and R. M. Jenkins, of Orleans, Ind., in a shootoff. The three had tied for first place by cracking 199 out of 200 targets.

TORGE COMES THROUGH

In an extra 25 for the decision, Torge went straight through without a miss; Arie dropped only one and took second honors, while Jenkins succeeded cracking 22, for third.

The Class A first honor went to H. C. Krout, of Maryland Line, Md., with his score of 198. Fred Martin, of Detroit, took second place with 195. Third place, however, caused a battle royal when six contestants tied for third place with 194's.

Four of them soon fell by the wayside in the shootoff, but M. C. Bray, of Blooming Prairie, Minn., and Morgan Davis, of Springfield, O., had to continue until they each fired at 100 targets to get a decision. Davis won it by hitting 99 while Bray shot 98.

A shootoff in Class B brought top honors there to Roy Finnell, of Akron, O., who defeated Frank Follmer, of Carthage, Mo. They first tied at 195, but in the extra round, the Ohioan cracked 23 to Follmer's 22.

A Canal Zone marksman, W. Fustites, of Balboa, led the Class C group under the wire with a score of 190.

IOWAN ELECTED

R. C. Coffey, of Prairie City, Iowa, was elected president of the American Trapshooting Association, it was announced here last night after polling had been completed. Coffey is a representative of the central zone.

Vice-presidents elected were C. W. Phellis, New York city, representing the Eastern zone; R. A. King, Wichita Falls, Texas, representing the Southern zone, and S. H. Sharman, Salt Lake City, representing the Western zone.

SANDLOT NINES AWAIT TEST

Striving to hold its half-game advantage, the Whitaker nine beards the lion in its den by meeting the Books at Olympia Park in what may be the deciding game of the second-half race in the City League this evening.

If Whitaker can win this evening and thus qualify to meet Dormont, the first-half champion, in the post-season playoff for the title, a special meeting will be called by President Everett Sweeny for tomorrow night to arrange the dates and other incidentals.

If the Books are successful this evening, they will have to meet the Brentwood Gillespies at Brentwood Park Sunday afternoon in the playoff of a tie game.

Olympia Park should see a record crowd this evening when Heinie Boll and Jimmy Henderson trot their aggregations out for the do-or-die contest.

The Beechview Merchants will oppose a team of former Broadway stars in a semi-pro baseball game Monday. Hen Gray, Russ Farrell, Smoke Cready, Tom Gano and Joe Baney are among those who will appear in the oldtimers' lineup.

Teams wishing to book Beechview for Labor Day games should call Lehigh 4380-R.

ACCIDENTS

Your family probably proves the rule: "Accidents happen in every home!" What parent cannot relate a tale of woe from minor cuts to major injuries? • What can you do to prevent accidents? No more than use reasonable care. • Keep dangerous implements, poisons, inflammable liquids out of children's reach. Keep household remedies on hand and, above all, keep a telephone in your home to summon aid with least delay!

No item of home equipment contributes more to your security and happiness than the telephone. You can have one in your home for less than 10 cents a day!

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF PENNSYLVANIA

VEECK PLAN RAZZED BY GRIFFITH

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Sharp criticism from Clark Griffith, gray-haired president of the Washington Senators, added to the impression that American League club owners, as a whole, do not look with favor upon the proposal for inaugurating mid-season inter-league competition between the two major baseball circuits next year. Griffith said:

"Nerts! Nobody thinks of that sort of stuff unless he's deaf, dumb and blind. We are not going in for any hippodrome stuff. The American League is a big league. Our business has held up at least as well as any other. Some of these guys can't take it. That's all. We're going on just the way we are. That's all I've got to say."

The only American League magnate so far to support the inter-league plan is Alva Bradley, president of the Cleveland club.

Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, is neither for nor against the proposition, at the present time.

and-cinder leagues, or what used to be known as the horse-and-buggy circuits. Moley appears to have picked up a sensational outfielder in Dick Etten, of the Mississippi Valley League, but this young man is at least two years "away," so that's that.

VETERAN RACE PILOT HURT

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Ben White, veteran race horse driver, was spilled from his sulky during the Grand Circuit program at the Illinois State Fair yesterday afternoon. He was treated at the emergency hospital for scratches and bruises about the face.

The 60-year-old reinsman drove Mary Reynolds to victory in the Hambletonian classic last week. The accident occurred at about the three-quarter-mile mark during the third heat of the featured 2:18 pace, which was won by Miss Abbedale, driven by S. D. Shell, of Indianapolis.

STOCK MARKET PRICE TONE STEADY

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Stocks and staples moved hopefully, but hesitantly, today and prices generally maintained a steady to firm tone.

There apparently were few incentives for either pronounced bearish or bullish operations and traders, aside from the professional element, usually occupied neutral territory. Various share specialties were taken in hand for substantial gains in early transactions, with mining issues the favorites. The proceedings were rather brisk in the second hour, but quieted down considerably after noon. Grains were heavy at the start, although they rallied later. Cotton firmed moderately. Bonds were dull and mixed. The dollar displayed further weakness in foreign exchange dealings.

Selectivity continued to mark trading in most stocks. This, to some financial observers, was encouraging as an indicator that the public, while having been somewhat chastened in the July break, is still optimistic toward certain issues and is buying with care instead of haphazardly.

Nearby inflationary prospects were again the principal topic of discussion in the "Street." While there were few analysts who anticipated any immediate drastic currency expansion, some expressed the opinion that a widening of the credit horizon, through large open market purchases of "governments" by the Federal Reserve System, might be expected.

Thus far more than 350 industrial companies have reported business results for the first half of the year. Profits, in the aggregate, were about double those of the same period in 1932. Most of the upturn came in the second quarter. The utilities, as a group, did not fare so well, their net earnings for the first six months dropping about 19 per cent behind last year's showing. The railroads made better comparisons than the utilities, although their improvement was principally in the narrowing of deficits. Sizeable share earnings of the carriers in June and July, however, have brought more hopeful estimates for the remainder of the year.

WHEAT DROPS UNDER SALES

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Brisk selling pushed grain prices lower at the start today. Pressure of offerings was not particularly heavy, but demand was slow and buyers cautious.

Wheat started 5/8 to 1¾ cents lower and then sat down at the bottom with trade at a standstill. Corn opened ¼ to 1⅛ cents off and stood still with wheat.

Prices gradually worked up to above yesterday's closing levels, but the gains were small and the market thin and erratic.

Absence of interest and the downward course of wheat pulled corn lower. There was no change in the new crop outlook and this was confirmed by the government weekly report, which said that, in spite of scattered showers, the general outlook for corn was unchanged. Corn later pulled up past yesterday's close on scattered buying.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Raw sugar was quiet early today. Futures opened unchanged to 3 points lower and later showed net declines of 3 to 4 points under liquidation and commission house selling prompted by the increased offerings in the spot market and the disappointing showing of London.

In refined withdrawals were only of fair proportions, while new business was light and supplied through re-sale offerings.

STATE BUILDING GAINS SHOWN

HARRISBURG, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The Labor and Industry Department today reported the rate of the customary July slump in building construction in the state was considerably less than last year.

The decrease from June this year was 7.9 per cent in contrast to a 55.8 per cent drop in 1932.

In 71 municipalities from which reports were filed, 1,833 permits were issued last month for construction estimated at $2,054,175. In June 2,239 permits were issued for work estimated at $2,230,370.

Forty-five cities reported substantial increases in the volume of permits over the total for July last year. Philadelphia increased $152,535 or 29.5 per cent and Pittsburgh, $50,153 or 26.5 per cent.

Wilkes-Barre leads a group of 12 municipalities whose seven-month building volume this year exceeds that of 1932. The Luzerne County city reported an increase of $319,434 or 120.4 per cent. New Castle showed $211,930 or 279.9 per cent; Allentown, $5138,-055 or 36.2 per cent, Lower Merton, Mount Lebanon and York reported gains of more than $50,-000. Smaller gains were shown by Butler, Connellsville, Meadville Monessen, Monongahela and Washington.

Bonds of Home Owners' Loan Corporation Offer Problem

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

JUST WHAT WILL be the value of a bond of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation?

Local bankers frankly admit that they are up in the air so far as this problem is concerned.

Most of them declare that they will accept bonds of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation when such action promises to save them from greater losses, but they admit that they do not care to hazard guesses as to the future value of such securities.

Several factors promise to keep the bonds close to their par value. For one thing, the bonds may be presented at par in payment of debts to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. If we assume that an individual owes $50 to the corporation as a monthly payment, and he is able to buy a $50 Home Owners' bond at less than par, he will be able to save money in making his payment.

Federal Government May Support Market

IT IS QUITE probable that some form of federal support will be given to the open market for bonds of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. The bonds bear interest of 4 per cent and mature in 18 years. Interest is guaranteed by the federal government, but not principal.

It is generally expected that the establishment of some form of open market for Home Owners' Loan Corporation bonds, issued from the $2,000,000 pool available for exchange for home mortgages, soon will be formally announced by the corporation.

Chairman William F. Stevenson, of the Loan Board, has intimated that this major policy will be undertaken within a few weeks. He added that tentative plans for facilitating active trading are definitely under consideration with officials of the federal agency fully convinced of the need for such action.

Need for Market Found Assured

THE OBJECT of the campaign is to provide relief for home owners where there is adequate security and the home owner has earning power to meet his new scale of obligations.

While at first there was much reluctance on the part of banks and insurance companies to accept the securities of the new government-sponsored organization, recent developments have changed the situation.

The first major corrective adopted was to have various government agencies, including the Treasury, agree to accept Home Loan bonds at face value, or near face value. At present, the Treasury will accept the obligations at full face value as collateral for deposits of public monies; the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will loan on a basis of 80 per cent of par; the Postal Savings System accepts the obligations at "market value."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

This quivering gunman had never seen a man executed by the state. All the same, he had dreamed about it thousands of times. He dreamed about it at regular intervals . . .

Sometimes it was the scaffold and sometimes it was the electric chair . . .

Men in his business, more often than not, have such things on their mind. Steve Poletzki was not an imaginative person but on certain subjects his powers of visualization were very, very vivid. Despite his brazenness, his pale skin grew a trifle paler.

"Fellows like you break down; the warden and the guards have to carry them up the steps," said Cavannaugh mercilessly. "You'll have that to look forward to if you don't listen to reason. San Quintin's a lot better. You'll be among old friends up there and you'll still be alive."

Glistening beads were standing on Poletzki's forehead.

"I don't know what you're talking about," he said desperately, "but let's hear it."

"It's a confession on the Annette Santos killing," Cavannaugh said. "You didn't intend to kill that woman—you intended to kill me—on account of a private grudge. That's a bum defense, but with the right lawyers it's the difference between life and the rope. If you make that confession they'll probably be willing to soft pedal the Kruger case. That was a mixup and you don't know who shot Kruger. If you want to make a confession I'll guarantee you—and you can take my word for it—that I'll hire the best mouthpiece in the state to see you through."

LUCKY ATTACKED

"Are you insane?" demanded Poletzki in an embittered tone. "I never heard of either of them people."

"On the other hand, if you want to be a fool you'll swing as sure as fate." Cavanaugh went on steadily. "You're smart enough to realize the spot you're in. The only thing that's going to save you is a lot of dough and a confession. I want that confession because they're charging me with killing Annette Santos. Use your head, man! I'm offering you the difference between life and death!"

Cavanaugh paused to light a cigaret. In that instant, Steve Poletzki, with a sudden fury of a tiger, launched himself through the air and came sprawling all over Lucky.

In one upraised hand, Poletzki held a heavy black object. The chair in which Cavanaugh sat toppled backwards and the men crashed to the floor together.

* * *

The little gold clock on Leni's dressing table raced breathlessly ahead with its soft ticking as though Time itself depended upon its own puny efforts. Leni was not asleep but fatigue, finally, had reduced her to a motionless quietude. She was conscious although it was difficult to continue orderly thinking.

ANXIETY REMAINS

In the last hour she had tried to blot out, with mechanical feminine activities, the anxiety of waiting for Cavanaugh's return.

She had called Celeste to do her nails. She had washed, brushed her hair, powdered her face. She had slipped off the silk and cloth-of-gold pajamas and put on an orchid colored afternoon gown that conformed to her slender elegance without a wrinkle.

Celeste, unbidden, brought her a small salad and black coffee in a silver pot. Leni barely touched the salad but found a grateful stimulation in the coffee.

Presently she was alone again, the hovering Celeste finally driven from the room. Alone and in the midst of a mental gray film that filled and dulled the whole afternoon. But this was only a quiet interlude. Leni heard the bell downstairs. Two minutes later Celeste came up.

"Mr. Gerstenfield to see you," she announced.

Leni hesitated. Gerstenfield was an annoyance, an obstacle. She was through with him and all he represented.

"Tell him I'm not at home," she instructed Celeste.

She was still lying lightly on the bed. Until she had heard from Cavanaugh she would remain thus, suspended in seclusion. But she had not reckoned with Gerstenfield's state of mind.

He had been kept waiting at the door and when Celeste returned with her polite refusal he pushed in past her, breathing heavily and impatiently. Celeste recoiled to keep him from walking right 'hrough her.

The girl was not alarmed. She lived in perpetual worship of Hollywood celebrities. They were, in Celeste's eyes, all gods and goddesses, and all slightly mad.

"Where is she?" demanded Gerstenfield standing with lowered head in the center of the hall.

Celeste shrank from the stabbing flash of crimson in his eyes. His face was flushed. This was unusual, as were the tiny beads of perspiration on his turbulent forehead.

"She—she's upstairs," breathed Celeste trembling.

Gerstenfield marched up the stairs completely ignoring Celeste. His back said very plainly that no servant dare stop him. Celeste shrugged. After all, perhaps her mistress needed a fierce row to bring her out of her present haze.

On the top landing, Gerstenfield looked around and decided upon Leni's door.

Inside his head a great vibration roared as a dynamo shakes the very air. Shocks like electric currents kept running through his breast and up and down his arms. Behind his eyes was a queer, hot ache. Strength and power hummed through all of his muscles, expanding and contracting them. Strangely, this sensation seemed to be colored—black, shot through with red tongues of fire.

LENI FRIGHTENED

Leni sat up abruptly in bed. Her room had been flung open and Gerstenfield stormed in, slamming the door behind him.

His sudden appearance was a shock—it seemed to Leni as though an explosion had hurled him into the privacy of her silent bedroom. Her staring eyes leaped alive with amazement.

"How did you get in here?" she asked. "What's the matter with you?"

It was the way he looked—livid lips quivering against the dark red flush of his distorted face. Fine beads of perspiration on a brow that was almost black.

"What's the matter with you?" she asked hollowly.

She stood up while Gerstenfield remained motionless devouring her with eyes which, despite their heat, were utterly without sparkle.

"You can't get away with it!" said Gerstenfield with an unnatural loudness. "You can't walk out on me for another man. I took you from a half-starved extra and made you a star. I worked the heart out of my body and the life out of my brain for these accursed motion pictures. Twenty years I've sweated blood—and what does it get me? I take a lifetime of experience and focus it all on you. You're ready to have the whole world at your feet. Without me you'd be nothing—you'd be dirt! You soak up the last drop of my vitality and then run out! No you don't! Not on your life!"

She faced him, helplessly watching his rage mounting to a frenzy. She looked at his hands—the fingers were clenching and unclenching like hooks. Her own face began to be drained of blood.

"I am not responsible because you are over-worked," she said trying to placate him. "You talk like you hated me. Probably you're on the verge of a breakdown."

"Breakdown, nothing—I'm already broke!" he cried, white lipped. "It was bound to come—and I don't give a darn! You didn't bother to wonder whether I went to pieces like a broken bottle, did you. You wanted a man that looked like a collar ad! A slick-haired gigolo to play with and spend your money. To the devil with Gerstenfield who put you up there with your husky playboy!"

Gerstenfield's loud voice, at the end sank and took on a thin note of penetration. Leni had backed away from him and maneuvered a chair between them.

"What do you want me to do about all this?" she asked in a chilling voice. "You come here and insult me beyond all reason. I'm trying to overlook it because you're out of your head. I'm not responsible for your troubles. My private life is my own and I'll live it as I please. I'm going to ask you to leave my house."

Gerstenfield's nostrils widened. The tiny veins in his eyes were so distended that he saw her, slim and fragile, through a haze of red.

With one stride he was upon her, flinging aside the chair. He took her by the shoulders and pushed her against a wall. One of his hands came up, hot and wet, to her cold throat.

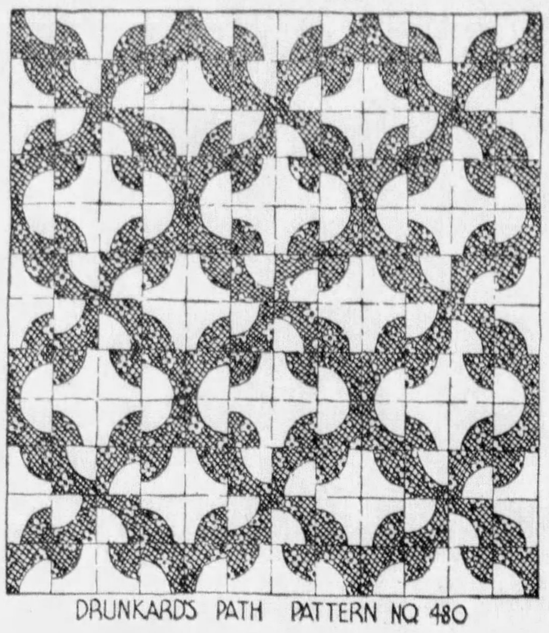
PATCHWORK QUILT PATTERN



DRUNKARDS PATH PATTERN NO 480

The Drunkard's Path was an old-time favorite, a fact that is readily understandable when one knows that but two pattern pieces are needed to make this handsome quilt. It is the clever alternating of the two pieces in the two materials and results in the ornate pattern. This quilt is attractively done either entirely in patchwork blocks as illustrated, or in alternate patchwork and plain blocks.

Pattern 480 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

The Junior Patrol Mail Box

See the picture at the bottom of the Mail Box today, fellows? Not bad, is it? Our congratulations to John Colbert, of 407 North Second avenue, Jeannette. This is the second drawing to be published in the Mail Box and it's very good work. We certainly hope that some other members draw some cartoons and pictures and send them in soon.

We had a letter from Gloria Haven, of 1324 Methyl street, Pittsburgh, today. She writes:

"I have 10 members and 11 counting myself. We have our club meeting every Tuesday. We have a party every two months. We are saving the Mail Boxes and read them at the club. We all repeat the pledge at every meeting. We are going to try to make up rules of our own and obey them. Today is our first meeting. We are going to have parties and weiner roasts, and hope we have a good time. If any new things turn up at our meetings, we will let you know. We have 11 members, but are going to try hard and get more. The members are going to wear their pins all the time and I, the captain, am going to wear my badge all the time."

That's real loyalty to the Junior Patrol, Gloria, and we will send you an armband right away. You seem to have a very fine program for your meetings. Keep up the good work.

NEWS NEWS NEWS NEWS

Capt. Gladys Hayward, of 504 Park avenue, Monongahela, sends in eight more pledges. That's almost enough to start another patrol, Gladys! Good work.

Dorothy Simpson, of 8929 Eastwood street, Wilkinsburg, writes that there is no Junior Patrol near her home. How about starting one in your neighborhood, Dot?

Altha Sullivan is the new captain of a Lemont Furnace Junior Patrol Club. He has 11 members and his secretary writes:

"We had a corn roast August 16 with all the members and one of their friends attending. We are going to have a weiner roast August 26."

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

For the dry shampoo there are two mediums, orris powder and corn meal. You can use either one, or you can combine them half and half. Brush the hair, sprinkle on the cleansing agent, using a tin salt shaker. Take the hair, strand by strand, brush from the roots as the hair is held away from the head. Finish grooming with a brush the bristles of which are covered with absorbent cotton.

Nervousness, fatigue, depression call for a balance of gentle outdoor exercise and complete relaxation. Get out and tramp. Come in doors, take a warm bath, lie down. Do a flop, muscles limp, brain foggy. It is possible to make the mind blank by creating drowsy thoughts. Visualize a dark forest. Imagine yourself a log, thus making the body feel heavy. Nerves will untie their knots, the tired body will find refreshment.

Styes signify under-standard health when they appear persistently over a long period. They are small boils, should be treated with hot fomentations, gauze which has been dipped in a hot solution of boric acid. Only a medical man should lance them.

Unless a woman feels that she is some use to somebody, necessary to somebody, giving of her strength and her spirit to weaker souls, she is not fulfilling her mission in life. She gets self-centered or indulges in self-pity, cooks up emotions that rob her of youthful appearance. In this business of beauty seeking, there is more than cosmetics, make-up, exercise; the great thing is to live splendidly, to develop character, to keep sweet. Spirit and courage add charm to the countenance, put pep in the step.

An Ace on the Ground

We remember old Bleriot who crashed the front pages years ago when he jockeyed a berry crate across the English Channel.

It hasn't been so many years since we saw our first aviator. His name was Hamilton. He came winging in from New York on the fly. We were perched on a boxcar in Torresdale and scanned the heavens in a sort of frog-eyed welcome.

But Hamilton wasn't that kind of an aviator. He flew about 15 feet above low tide and seemed to have invented a new kind of safe aviation with one foot on the ground. He knocked us all off that boxcar and went on in giant leaps like a superior kind of grasshopper.

We were so close to him that we will never forget that his thin, determined face was bracketed by the biggest pair of red, transparent ears we had ever seen. They looked like ailerons and must have been a big help to him on slow banks.

Hamilton flew about the same time as Santos-Dumont, Graham-White and Lincoln Beachey. They were the heroes of early aviation. And while they captivated our imagination we never had the desire to emulate their gadgets. Thinking it over, we never did care for any pastime in which they asked you the name of your nearest living relative. That ain't sport.

We can still visualize Santos-Dumont in his one-man dirigible. When he wanted to go up he ran back along the cat walk. And it was a cat walk. No wider than the top of a Kentucky rail fence. Coming down, he would gallop to the front end of the feline chalk line. He was the busiest man you ever saw outside of a cafeteria at high noon.

The last time we flew was at Kelly Field, Tex. We didn't know that John McGraw had told Lieut. Doyle to give us the works. Right now, we cannot state just what our personal contribution to aviation was because we forgot what we had for lunch that day. Anyway, that's what it was.

Since then, we have read all about the terrific flights around the world. We saw Lindbergh land at LeBourget, helped to welcome Balbo at Jamaica Bay and was there when Post came in.

It is our ambition to become an ace on the welcome committee. It's nice work if you can get it. And may lead to a battle-scarred uniform on the Governor's staff.

McArdle's Platform

The Independent Republican Candidate's Views Reflect Sincerity and Careful Thought.

P. J. McArdle, the independent Republican candidate for Mayor, is an honest man and a thinker, and he has been connected with the city government and a close observer of its workings for many years. Add to these qualifications his ability to express himself clearly, and you would have every reason to expect that when he discusses municipal affairs he would say something worth hearing.

Those who listened with this expectation to the address in which he set forth his platform were not disappointed. It was a good speech.

McArdle's proposals are sound and desirable. Take, for example, his advocacy of an audit of the city's affairs. Everyone who has sought to obtain a detailed statement concerning the city's financial condition will appreciate the need of such an accounting. As matters stand now, one will obtain almost as many interpretations of the figures as the number of the officials consulted.

He asks particularly for an investigation of the cost of operating the Department of Public Works, including the expenditures for engineering services, and the Bureau of Water. An audit such as he proposes might well pave the way for important economies.

Money undoubtedly could be saved for the taxpayers by a change in our system of disposing of garbage and rubbish. The city has paid more for this service than was necessary. McArdle would have the city build and own incineration plants, but would let contracts to commercial concerns for the collection and delivery of garbage and rubbish to the plants—contracts for a period long enough to warrant the necessary investment in the necessary equipment. Long-term contracts, which would make it worth while for companies to invest in equipment, and so would tempt a greater number of bidders than we now have and stimulate competition, unquestionably would reduce the cost of this service to the people.

As was to be expected in an official with McArdle's high ideals of public service, he does not like the spoils system; and so he would take the police out of politics and establish a real civil service system, administered by men not subject to political influence. Merit, not "pull," would win promotion. Here is a case in which McArdle's honesty plays a big part. Many a candidate has promised to be guided by the merit system, but after election has forgotten his promise and treated jobs of all sorts as the spoils of victory, to be used for his own advantage or his faction's advantage rather than the welfare of the general public.

Meritorious, too, is his demand that the city take an active part in utility rate cases affecting the citizens. It is not his idea that the city should invariably oppose rate increases; but it should know and understand what is proposed and should see that justice is done. Participation in rate cases is a legitimate function of the city government.

That there is need for greater alertness on the part of the city government in respect to utility rate matters was discovered by the Sun-Telegraph several years ago when it learned that a proposed increase in taxicab rates—an unjustified increase—was on the eve of going into effect without the city law department being aware of it. On being informed of the situation, the city solicitor protested against the increase, and the taxi companies withdrew their application to the Public Service Commission for permission to raise rates.

We have commented on only a few of the salient planks in McArdle's platform. It is a serious platform, carefully thought out by a studious and sincere-minded man, and deserves the serious consideration of every citizen.

The New Postmaster

President Roosevelt Has Made Another Good Appointment in Naming W. M. Turner.

In the appointment of William M. Turner as postmaster of Pittsburgh the city has again fared well at the hands of the Roosevelt administration.

Running the postoffice is a businessman's job, and Turner, a successful businessman, is well fitted for it.

The appointment is rather unusual in that Turner does not reside within the corporate limits of the city, but lives in Wilkinsburg, of which he has been Burgess. But that is, of course, no objection to his appointment, since Wilkinsburg is part of the district served by the Pittsburgh postoffice.

Moreover, the appointment of a citizen of Wilkinsburg as postmaster of Pittsburgh is just another reminder of the fact that the suburbs, although separate municipal corporations, are commonly regarded as parts of the city and will become so in fact if the Metropolitan District plan on which the citizens are to vote in November is put into effect.

By reason of his business training and personal characteristics Pittsburgh can count confidently on a good administration of the postoffice by the new appointee.

The appointment has a sentimental appeal, too. Burgess Turner's father, William Turner, also served in the Nation's postal service. He was acting postmaster of Wilkinsburg before the Civil War and served for two years, resigning to enter the Union Army in the 101st Pennsylvania Volunteers.

New Deal in Education

Pennsylvania Tots Are to Be Taught About Reforestation and the Science of Good Highways.

Radical changes are being made in education, as in other branches of human activity.

In a statement concerning the preparations that are being made for the reopening of the public schools in September for more than 2,000,000 Pennsylvania boys and girls, the Department of Education at Harrisburg announces that a new science course will be introduced for grades one to six.

Among the things in which the children are to receive instruction are conservation, reforestation, the science of good highways and scientific helps for the housewife. There is no question about the course being up to date.

School, by the way, is more attractive to the children than it used to be. In 1923 a total of 151,620 youngsters were given black marks for truancy in Pennsylvania's public schools. The total number of truants last year was 68,407, a reduction of 45 per cent.

And the fishing is better, too.

Marry-Go-Round

The Career—and the Woman

"A caress is better than a career," is offered by Reader's Digest as the late Elizabeth Marbury's philosophy for women.

* * *

I never heard Miss Marbury use just those words; but, well do I remember her frank, blunt arguments in favor of love, marriage and domesticity for women in preference to ANY career, however brilliant. Yet, Elizabeth Marbury lived and died a "career-woman." To her, marriage was "the best career in the world"—for some OTHER woman.

Just what DOES a career bring a woman? That's the vital question, today.

The best thing it brings her is WORK—hard work, and sometimes, the work she WANTS to do.

* * *

* * *

It brings her excitement and stimulating interests—and long days of dull drudgery. It brings her travel, adventure and concontacts with interesting people—and lays her open to the painful attentions of bores and hangers-on and autograph collectors.

* * *

But it does NOT bring her HAPPINESS!

The humblest little newly-wed, sewing on a baby's guimpe or shopping for a bassinet, enjoys a keener thrill than the most popular prima donna bowing to the Golden Horseshoe.

The simplest little housewife, hemming a pair of gingham curtains for her kitchenette, gets a bigger kick out of her task than the most brilliant novelist laboring over a chapter of her next best-seller. * * *

A successful career means the sacrifice of most of the things in life that a normal woman's heart really craves. No time to play or to go to parties or to do any of those little things around the house that every woman's fingers are itching to do.

* * *

Still, a "career-woman" is born that way! She doesn't CHOOSE a career. Her career chooses HER. And success is like a live-wire: once you grasp it, you just can't let GO, somehow. Some women were born for a career—and some women were born to be happy. Only a rare few were born for both.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—So far as the metropolis is concerned prohibition of liquor does not exist. The town is wide open. There are swing-door saloons everywhere and from most a passerby can hear the rattle of the cocktail shaker and the fizz of high ball seltzer.

One on Tenth avenue even brazenly flaunts a window card: "We Do Not Sell 3.2 Beer." Some tonier hotels, which observed the liquor laws during the long drought, now serve cocktails and table wine openly. Often such service may be observed from the street.

The beer saloons on the Bowery have also acquired their old-time flavor. Saw-dust is sprinkled on the floor and the barkeepers have the familiar bristly pompadours and are growing handy with the bung starter. Extravagant beer gardens with Viennese orchestras have not fulfilled expectations.

New York is not yet weaned from speakeasies. They provided an outlet for the instinct to herd amid a plush and tapestried grandeur even the gaudiest of old-time bar-rooms did not offer. Now that the sky is the limit in such places, beer gardens have little appeal.

From Park Row down the narrow slit of Nassau street and into Wall and Broad the other afternoon a woe-begone creature wandered slowly, holding aloft a banner upon which was scrawled: "I've been in jail two months for getting bread for my family. What have they done to Morgan, Mitchell, Broderick, Kahn and Harriman? Answer: What they always do to the rich—free them." It was a bit embarrassing and in one instance an annoyed gazer yanked down the blind.

Driving over Twenty-sixth street the other evening, I passed by a three-storied building whose curb was lined with motor delivery trucks. All about were horsemen—well barbered as all gamblers are late afternoons. I learned they were waiting for copies hot off the press of a daily racing sheet called The Daily Running Horse, the Bible of men and women who play an eternally losing game. New York has 600,000 of them.

And in a leisurely drive through a tense, jostling section of Manhattan's Ghetto there was unforgettable memory of the affectionate gaze of elders, who sit in shadowy doorways, upon the newer and brightly dressed generation. A pathetic docility to "My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways" Israel has always given over its heart to children. Yet scattered in its wanderings and oppressed, an older Israel has never lost the Tables of the Law, never forgot the old things, never became quite deaf to the rustle of tents in the wind . . .

Gossipers have taken unusual liberties with the supposed triangle embracing Norma Talmadge, George Jessel and Joe Schenck. I have an accurate version of the couple in a Hollywood restaurant bar. Schenck came in, said "Hello" to Jessel, kissed Miss Talmadge and had quite an argument with Jessel. But as to who would pay for the drinks, Jessel paid. Then wandered away a while for them to talk, returned and all walked out together. Friendly even if a bit modern.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I believe in you.

Easy enough to write those four words. Darned hard to mean them. For newspaper people aren't supposed to believe in the people they write for. And there's a reason. No one on earth sees as much human stupidity and meanness as a newspaper writer. No one on earth is double-crossed as often . . . has to take such a beating from the mob.

From the day you begin punching a newspaper typewriter, you're warned that "people are sheep." Don't trust them! Don't take them seriously! Don't ever expect any real understanding from them! Talk down to them! Give them three cents worth of daily chatter and let it go at that!

Cynical? Maybe. But it's dollars to doughnuts, stranger, you'd feel that way too if you could see all the proofs . . . or had to stand all the punishment which a newspaper writer must take. And yet—I'm telling you again—

I BELIEVE IN YOU!

And that's not just pretty palavar. For fifteen years I've held this job. For every hour of those fifteen years I've been bucking every variety of human cussedness—including my own. And take it from me, it has been no parlor game.

Running a column is like being one of those Human Targets in a midway concession . . . every nitwit and weasel along the boardwalk has a chance to take a whack at you—and does. Dirty minded degenerates write filthy letters to you. Silly old satyrs proposition you. Mad mammas maul you. Peevish papas lie to you. Spineless sisters sob over you. Meddling old hens, of both sexes, complain about you. In short, if you want to believe that the Dear Public is a Such-n'-Such-of-a-So-n'-So you have 35,679,852 Good Reasons. But still—I don't! In spite of it all—

I BELIEVE IN YOU!

And every day I believe in you more. All those 35,679,852 reasons to the contrary, notwithstanding—

I BELIEVE YOU'RE REGULAR!
I BELIEVE YOU'RE SQUARE!
I BELIEVE YOU'RE CLEAN!
I BELIEVE YOU'RE KIND!
I BELIEVE YOU HAVE BRAINS . . . AND USE 'EM!
I BELIEVE YOU HAVE HEARTS . . . AND RISK 'EM!
AND NO MATTER WHAT YOUR RECORD, I BELIEVE THAT YOU REALLY WANT TO MAKE GOOD—AND, GIVEN THE BREAKS, WILL DO IT!

But why do I believe these things about you, against all damning evidence?

Because, against all damning evidence, I believe them about myself! If you're a mean proposition—so am I. If you pull bonehead blunders—so do I. If you've lied and ducked, boasted, bullied and double-crossed — so have I. And yet—I'm betting on myself. And some mighty Wise Eggs, who know all about me, are betting on me, too.

THEN WHY SHOULDN'T I BET ON YOU?

The answer is—I DO!

I believe in you. I'm betting on you. I'm backing you—with all I have. You've hurt me a million times—but you've helped me ten million! For every one proof of your cruelty, I have a thousand proofs of your kindness. For every evidence of your stupidity, I can produce overwhelming evidence that—taking you by and large—you've plenty above the ears.

"Talk down to you?" Never! You've kept me hustling. TALKING UP TO YOU . . . LIVING UP TO YOU . . . ever since you took me on as partner. And today—

ALL THAT I KNOW OF COURAGE, OF FINENESS, OF BEAUTY AND HONOR AND TENDERNESS . . . I'VE FOUND IN YOU!

THANK YOU, OLD DEARS!

P. S. And now—g'wan! Loosen up! Take a minute off, grab the old pencil, shoot me a line and say—"The same Big Girl, to you!" Because—maybe I need a little buckin' up, too.

The Human Side of the News

Unprecedented Number of Mohammedans Make The Pilgrimage to Mecca—Many Millions Still Cling to the Faith

By EDWIN C. HILL

NEWS FROM the Near East and the Far East brings word that greater numbers of Mohammedans are making the holy pilgrimage to Mecca, in Arabia, than was ever before known in history. Almost every ship that puts out from an Indian Ocean port bears upon its open decks its cargoes of brown men and yellow men and black men. They're all bound for Mohammed's city to kiss the great black stone of Abraham, win the green turban of holiness and insure their places in the paradise that Mohammed promised, the paradise of eternal gardens and houris.

At a time when many say that all religion is suffering from a decline in faith, from a worship of material gods, this news of the resurgence of the faith that once overran Europe and came near to wrecking Christian civilization, is interesting and significant. After nearly 1,300 years there is a vitality in the Mohammedan faith that challenges respect. Every day of the year 300,000,000 men go down on their knees, face toward the East, toward Mecca, and bow their heads to the ground.

As the call of the muezzins rings from the minarets these millions raise their hands in a gesture of adoration and cry aloud, in a multitude of tongues and dialects, the affirmation and challenge that links the Mohammedan world together: "Allah il Allah, Allah Akbar!" . . . "God is God, God is great!" . . . All over the world, as well as in the Near East and Far East, that chant is raised. It comes from the little back rooms and slums of the London East Side, from the dock-side of Sydney in Australia, from Capetown, from San Francisco and from the heart of the New York East Side; from the huts of tea and rubber coolies of Borneo and Sumatra, from the teeming bazars of Gandhi's India, from every country in the world where the sun drives its own savage intensity into the human spirit.

Daily Ritual Is Never Evaded

NEVER IS the daily ritual evaded or forgotten. When the muezzin climbs the tower and greets the rising red ball of the sun with that trumpet call of the Mohammedan belief in the one God and Mohammed his Prophet, black men and brown men in the heart of Africa, in the jungles of Siam, in the rice fields of India, in the deserts of the Soudan and Arabia or in the mountains of Algeria and Morocco, and white men in the Balkans repeat the words of the holy Koran, the Mohammedan Bible, bowing their heads toward a piece of ground no bigger than a city square, toward an old shrine crumbling into dust and rubble.

Their prayers, their hearts and their very hope of afterlife go out to a black stone which is the sacred shrine of the Mohammedan world, the Kaaba. Almost 4,000 years ago the shrine was built by a Syrian peasant named Ibrahim. He was the Abraham of the Old Testament and the Jewish faith, but the father of the Arab race as well as the Jewish.

Upon a great black stone, as goes the legend believed with passionate faith by the Mohammedan world, he laid his favorite son Isaac and was about to slay him as a sacrifice to God when the angel Djebrail, as the Arabs name him, the angel Gabriel we call him, stayed his hand. Many hundreds of years later in that same Mecca, when men had fallen away from the worship of Jehovah, the one God, and bowed down before idols a clever man named Mohammed came into the world. He suffered from epilepsy and was given to visions and strange dreams. And in those dreams, so three hundred million people believe today and would gladly die to defend that belief, God revealed himself and commanded him to destroy the idols and carry over the world, with fire and sword, the command that men must turn back to the one god.

Mohammed's Wife His First Convert

HIS FIRST convert was his wife. All others jeered at him, mocked his fiery zeal. But faith overcame more than mountains in Mohammed's case. It came nearly overturning the world. Even in his lifetime a great wave of Moslem fanaticism swept westward, beating up around the Mediterranean in great breakers and finally it engulfed Egypt and Spain and part of Italy, and rolled over the old Greek Empire which is now European Turkey and Bulgaria.

It reached its crest on a battlefield in France when the great Frankish chief Charles Martel stood against it with his yellow-haired warriors and broke it and rolled it back, but for centuries it lay in a sullen backwater in Spain and Italy and southeastern Europe.

Some of the most heroic and brilliant annals of mankind are intertwined with that great struggle between Mohammedanism and Christianity—the Moors in sunny Spain and the story of the Alhambra and of Granada; the Arabs and Saracens in Italy; the Crusades with those long columns of tall white men in armor flowing from Europe to perish on the battlefields of the Holy Land—the Holy Land of the Mohammedans as well as of the Jews and the Nazarenes.

And it is a curious thing that three great religious faiths, comprising half the population of the whole earth should be centered down to this very day upon a little stretch of territory no bigger than the state of Indiana. And so Mecca, through all the ebb and flow of the power of Mohammedanism became the holy city of the faith, to reach which every Mohammedan will sacrifice anything in the world.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

The man from the small village wonders why people in metropolitan centers seem to be in such a hurry.

Unless he has worked in the city at some time he cannot realize how much faster people work in the larger places.

They may not work so many hours but they accomplish more.

And without doubt most of them travel from one to two hours both morning and evening to get to their working place.

Everyone is in a hurry; even walking becomes a swift pace whether walking for pleasure or of necessity.

Men and women seem to be rushing hither and thither, and in a needless manner.

Pedestrians are not unlike many drivers of automobiles who speed along with no other object than to get the thrills which come from speeding.

No thought of the jeopardy in which they place those who cross the throughfares, and who may be caught between curbs by the changing light.

But there is much needless rushing on the part of pedestrians—it is a habit the city establishes.

ISN'T IT SO?

Some women grow old before their time trying to look young after their time.

Many a young man has set out to conquer the world and ended up by getting married.

There is a remedy for everything except some of the remedies.

Misery loves company, but it is better to have rheumatism in one foot than in both.
